Plastic Medical Cards To Record MD Visits

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbians visiting their family doctor in the future will be required to take along a plastic credit card-style medical identity card, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Wednesday.

The doctor's receptionist will run it through a machine to record each visit, he said. Eventually, every person in the province will have an identifying number for medical purposes.

McClelland said there would likely be objections to the plan and, because of difficulties in establishing a satisfactory identity number system, it will likely be two or three years before it is introduced.

The minister disclosed details of the plan after confirming that the government had backed down on its order that patients must sign medical care claim forms when they visit a doctor.

The government and the board of directors of the B.C. Medical Association have agreed to a three-part plan "which will allow the government to shelve its card-signing requirement," McClelland said.

However the plan still meets "the audit and accountibility objectives of the ministry of health, of the Medical Services Commission and of the medical profession itself," he told members of Vancouver Centre Social Credit Constituency Association during their annual meeting.

As well as the introduction of plastic identity cards, the plan also calls for expansion of the BCMA's patterns of practice committee to include a member of the public and a representative of the provincial government.

The third part of the plan calls for increasing the number of itemized statements mailed to the public.

McClelland said that up to now the patterns of practice committee had consisted only of doctors and he was pleased that the BCMA agreed there were advantages to having the public and government represented on the committee.

The minister said he hoped the agreement would end an atmosphere of confrontation which existed between the government and the medical profession.

Both sides have a stake in keeping down costs of the province's medical insurance plan, he said.

Trudeau Sees Spring Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he expects to lead the Liberals into a general election sometime next spring.

Trudeau said at a news conference that he will present a program to Parliament when it resumes. He said he wants "to clear the decks and show the people what our intentions are" before the election.

Asked about his future as leader of the party, the prime minister replied that he expects to head the governing Liberals through the next election.

Squamish Loses To Taxis

SQUAMISH (CP) — Vancouver longshoremen employed here travel 40 miles to and from work each day by taxi at a cost of $500,000 a year while Squamish residents can't find jobs.

But Squamish Mayor Pat Brennan, who called union and company officials together to complain about the situation, was told Tuesday he can do little about the arrangement because the terms are written into the labor contract.

This situation exists, he said, because the dock is within the jurisdiction of Local 500 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, based in Vancouver.

Brennan said jobs have been scarce in Squamish since the closure last fall of the B.C. Railway rail car manufacturing plant, which put 170 employees out of work.

Squamish Terminals manager Frank Collard said the the Squamish dock, opened in December, 1971, handles about 500,000 tons of pulp annually. The town is pushing for funds for a second berth, but would like to clear up the manning problem first.

He said the longshoremen want the best of both worlds. They take jobs in Squamish when there is little work in Vancouver but two or three times a year, Squamish is short of manpower because the Vancouver port is busy.

WELCOME BACK HORTON is the message given this boa constrictor by Shelley Scott and other students at a Brandon, Man. school. Horton went missing for four weeks and was found curled up in a corner of a classroom.

B.C. Eyes Control Of Local Budgets

The provincial cabinet is considering ways of limiting budget increases imposed by local governments, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said today.

Asked if provincial control of those budgets is a real possibility in the near future, Wolfe replied: "No comment."

Wolfe, chairman of the six-member cabinet property taxation committee, stressed a means of controlling municipal and school board budgets is just one of many topics discussed by the committee over the past two years.

There are a number of recommendations in a report on municipal assessments that the cabinet is looking at, Wolfe said.

He would not elaborate.

Wolfe said the public, such as the homeowners at a Delta meeting Wednesday, have been asking the provincial government to control municipal-level spending.

But the minister had little to say about what the government is considering and at times in an interview following a taxation talk to the Delta Chamber of Commerce, he appeared annoyed that he had even mentioned the possibility of budget control in the interview.

During his speech to the chamber and some of almost 260 South Delta property owners who recently got a supplementary tax payment notice following a computer foulup by the government's B.C. Assessment Authority, Wolfe said he welcomes the California taxpayers' revolt and its spread to B.C.

In a question period following his talk he heard complaints from many businessmen and particularly the South Delta residents, some of whom said they had no complaint about their assessments but they did not like the municipal mill rate which determines the taxes to be paid.

A few suggested it is time for the provincial government to step in and control municipal and school spending.

Wolfe told the meeting that this could be difficult because councils and school boards

S. Africa Violence Flares

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — Police holding leashed dogs raided a squatters camp, shot and killed one black and wounded another in the worst flareup of racial violence in months.

Witnesses said hundreds were arrested and police used teargas in the early morning raid against rock-throwing blacks in the camp, a sprawling collection of makeshift tents holding 6,000 blacks.

The South African government has vowed to clear out squatter camps because they are unhygienic.

The riot police wielding batons swarmed into the Crossroads squatter camp and began checking residents for "passes" which all adult South African blacks need to remain in white areas.

Gen. Dawid Kiel, South Africa's Chief of Riot Police, said one black was killed after he attacked a policeman.

"I don't think there'll be any more trouble now," Kriel said.

Witnesses said a black woman was wounded in the arm by gunfire.

Blacks retaliated with rock-throwing bursts against the police after the shooting, witnesses said. Crowds gathered around the dead man, and for a while they refused to allow police to take away his body.

Police launched a routine midnight raid without incident and then returned for a second, unexpected, investigation just after dawn. By 9 a.m. hundreds of residents were bundled into waiting vans — apparently because they lacked valid passes, witnesses said.

TALKS ENDING

Blueprint For Mid-East Settlement At Hand

CAMP DAVID (UPI) — The Camp David summit is nearing an end, and conference and congressional sources say agreement is close on a detailed and comprehensive blueprint for an eventual Middle East settlement.

The framework is an ambitious undertaking, according to the sources, who said it goes far beyond the broad declaration of principles that was one of the early options at the summit.

Conference sources said the agreement is shaping up "but if it is to be reached still more flexibility has to be shown by both sides."

As the conference moved toward its climax, the need to settle the final details prompted President Carter to postpone for a week a four-state political tour of North and South Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania he intended to make this weekend.

He also did not return to Washington, as he had planned, to host a concert at the White House by country singer Willie Nelson. Rosalynn Carter and the president's brother, Billy, played host in his absence.

Congressional sources said Carter is expected to make a report to the nation soon on the summit negotiations, and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will spend two or three days talking to members of Congress and other American leaders before returning home.

A comprehensive blueprint would serve as a guideline for a comprehensive Middle East settlement that would have to include Jordan, since the occupied West Bank is a key issue.

The final details would be worked out by the foreign ministers of the countries, perhaps beginning within two weeks.

The sources said the comprehensive blueprint covers the main points in dispute but leaves open some points that could not be settled.

BEER WALKOUT OVER HIRING

Brewery workers at the Labatt Breweries plant in New Westminster walked off the job Wednesday in a dispute over the hiring of non-union security guards.

John Langley of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers said the guards originally were hired during the labor dispute that closed most B.C. breweries for three months this summer.

"The guards crossed picket lines," Langley said, and at Labatts there were several incidents between the guards and pickets.

"That bad blood apparently has carried over even when we were prepared to go to work," he said. About 270 workers are affected.

There was no indication the walkout might spread to other brewery operations.

Meanwhile, Labatts has so far hired back only 75 of its 100 Victoria employees because of the low level of purchases by the Liquor Distribution Branch, the company said today.

"We're having a difficult time keeping the 75 people busy," Victoria manager Robert Mussett said.

"There is one shift of 25 employees who have not yet been hired back and it might be several weeks before we can take them on."

He said he hopes the company will be able to sell more beer to government liquor stores soon so all employees could get back to work.

Mainland breweries have also reported business is slow and some layoffs have resulted.

One Vancouver firm has laid off 100 workers and is going with one shift instead of three.

Architect Got $36,000 Suite

MONTREAL (CP) — French architect Roger Taillibert was provided with a $36,000-a-year permanent suite at Montreal's Queen Elizabeth hotel, an inquiry into the cost of the 1976 Olympic Games was told Wednesday.

Claude Phaneuf, a former City of Montreal engineer who directed games construction, said Taillibert came to Montreal often to work on plans for games facilities he designed.

The suite was rented on a permanent basis because it was not always easy to obtain a reservation at the downtown hotel which Taillibert preferred, Phaneuf said. He added that to the best of his memory the rental arrangement ran for 18 months starting sometime in 1974.

Asked by commission counsel Jacques Dagenais why the city did not save money by renting an apartment for Taillibert, Phaneuf said he did not know.

"Taillibert had moved into the Queen Elizabeth hotel and I wasn't the one who had the authority to move him out," he said.

"As well, we weren't about to move out all his voluminous plans each time," Phaneuf said. "He sometimes came to Montreal twice a week.

"Taillibert had hours that were different from the rest of us. He would go to bed late and get up early."

Asked why the architect did not work in a City of Montreal office, Phaneuf said it was because he had had "certain confrontations with Taillibert."

Taillibert, along with Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau, has been one of the main figures discussed in testimony heard in the first two weeks of public hearings before the inquiry.

BUSES BACK BY FRIDAY

TORONTO (CP) — Buses, streetcars and subway trains in Toronto will be operating again Friday morning as a result of provincial legislation ordering an end to a strike by about 7,000 employees of the Toronto Transit Commission, commission and union officials say.

Charles Johnson, president of Division 113 of the union, said in a statement that the union had directed its members to return to work "no matter what their personal feelings may be."

Gearing Up for a Shutdown of Mails

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

With a mail strike threatened for Sept. 22, Victoria businessmen are angry, airlines have mixed emotions and courier service managers are rubbing their hands in glee.

"These mail strike threats are a great exasperation," Victoria Chamber of Commerce president John Ansell said today.

Ansell said the chamber is gearing up a cross-Canada mail and parcel service that would use courier companies to deliver sacks to chamber offices in other cities.

Businessmen would be able to pick up incoming mail at the chamber office.

"This service is for chamber members only," Ansell said, "and we don't want to compete with private courier services — we are just doing our best to look after the needs of the community."

Ansell said chamber staff members will phone local merchants when mail comes in and members would have to pick it up themselves since the staff will not be able to handle deliveries as well.

Meanwhile, Harry Lund, manager of Ace Courier (formerly Pacific Rim Courier) said a mail strike would be the best thing that ever happened to the company.

"We have 12 employees here now and we would have to hire more to handle all the business.

Lund said most of the business would come from merchants and government departments because residents find the $6 cost to send a parcel to Vancouver a bit expensive.

"Still, it's not a bad price for overnight guaranteed delivery. It's as low as we can make it."

Lund said Victoria courier services would have more business than they could handle if a mail strike hits but they would do their best by hiring additional people.

Spokesmen for major department stores were resigned about mail strikes and said they plan to beef up their in-plant delivery systems.

A spokesman for The Bay said the company has retained delivery systems it developed in previous mail strikes and is, not too concerned.

Air Canada would both lose and gain if the letter carriers strike on Sept. 22.

The company has a new Airvelope Service which takes parcels under two pounds to any of 17 major Canadian cities for next-day delivery at a charge of $8.

CANADA BOAT HITS BOTTOM

DETROIT (CP) — The wheel of fortune turned dramatically in the Canada's Cup yachting series here Wednesday.

Canadian challenger Evergreen, from Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, after two impressive short-course victories, ran into trouble on the choppy, shallow waters of Lake St. Clair during the middle-distance race. On the first leg of the 75- to 100-mile race, she hit bottom, damaged her daggerboard and her rudder and was forced to drop out after rounding the third mark.

Wave of Black Arrests Reported

Times News Services

SALISBURY — The Rhodesian government has reportedly rounded up more than 300 black nationalist officials associated with the two guerrilla factions fighting to overthrow Rhodesia's faltering multiracial transitional government.

A spokesman for Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) said that at least 320 officials of his group have been arrested and that the police were apparently seeking others. As yet, there has been no comment from the government on the arrests.

The arrests follow Prime Minister Ian Smith's declaration Sunday that the government planned "to liquidate the internal workings" of those groups inside the country linked either to ZAPU or Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU). The two make up the Patriotic Front, the guerrilla alliance operating from Zambia and Mozamdique.

At least five members of the People's Movement, the pro-Mugabe organization here, are also known to have been arrested so far.

It is still not clear whether the government intends to ban outright the People's Movement and ZAPU, also called inside Rhodesia the African National Council (Zimbabwe). But the general assumption here Wednesday was that it probably would not go that far.

Nkomo has already declared in the wake of Smith's new measures that the all-party conference being promoted by Britain and the United States is "dead and buried." But observers here doubt this is his final word on the conference and Mugabe is still in favor of it.

British and American diplomats have decided to lie low and abstain from fresh initiatives for a while.

This, it was learned Wednesday, was the central outcome of a private meeting in London last Saturday involving British Foreign Minister David Owen; Richard Moose, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs; Anthony Lake, director of the State Department policy planning unit, and other key British and American diplomats.

Nkomo joins Mugabe, who arrived in Addis Abba earlier this week to attend celebrations marking the fourth anniversary of the overthrow of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Nicaragua Braces

MANAGUA (AP) — Guerrillas holding three cities in northwest Nicaragua were reinforcing their positions today and manning barricades on the Pan-American Highway against weary national guard troops sent north by President Anastasio Somoza to put down the threat to his family's 41-year domination of Nicaragua.

As both sides braced for decisive battles in the northwestern cities of Chinandega, Esteli and Leon, Somoza declared martial law, and his troops carried out a house-to-house search of Masaya, the southern city they retook Tuesday, arresting or shooting any men they found.

Somoza's government also imposed military censorship on Nicaragua's only opposition national newspaper, La Prensa. Its publisher, Xavier Chamorro, told a news conference he was informed of the move in a telephone call from national guard headquarters. It was not immediately known whether Novedades, the pro-Somoza paper, also was being censored.

Somoza has been under pressure to resign since the assassination Jan. 10 of former La Prensa publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, a longtime outspoken foe of the Somoza government.

Six men arrested in connection with the assassination testified in court that they were paid $100,000 by government officials to kill Chamorro. Somoza has denied their allegations.

Heavy fighting also was reported in Rivas, 128 kilometres south of Managua and 24 km from the Costa Rican border, and the rebels were reported regrouping for an attack on Masaya, 29 km southeast of the capital.

Most shops and offices in Managua were still closed by a general strike against Somoza, but the heavily patrolled capital was generally quiet.

$1 MILLION WINNERS

John Bagley, 60, and his wife, Pauline, 56, claimed the big prize from the July 30 Provincial draw Wednesday in the Western Express lottery office in Winnipeg.

Asked why the Bagleys took so long to come forward, a Lottery spokesman said "for reasons of their own."

$30,000 Fraud Of Welfare

VERNON (CP) — Nora Jean Hepburn and Herbert George Hepburn of Vernon each received three-year penitentiary terms after being found guilty of defrauding the provincial welfare commission of more than $30,000.

Judge Ken Arkell of Vernon county court sentenced the couple after a jury found them guilty.

Mrs. Hepburn was found guilty on two counts of defrauding the commission singularly and two counts of defrauding it jointly with her husband.

Testimony at the one-week trial said that from April, 1975, to April, 1977, the couple was collecting benefits from five welfare offices in the Vernon area by using assumed names and identities.

Stonehouse Appeal Fails

LONDON (AP) — The home office says it has rejected an appeal from former Labor cabinet minister John Stonehouse for parole from his seven-year prison sentence. Stonehouse, 53, disappeared from a Miami, Fla., beach in 1974 and fled to Australia. He was convicted of fraud, theft and forgery in 1976.

Japan Won D-Day for Allies

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Japan's Second World War ambassador to Germany unwittingly supplied the Allies with detailed plans of German fortifications along the coast of France more than six months before the invasion of Normandy."

After a two-week tour of German coastal defences in Normandy and Brittany, Japanese Ambassador Hiroshi Oshima radioed a 30-page message to Tokyo describing his trip. His briefings by the German high command gave their plans for defending the coast and details of the German fortifications and weapons along the coast.

Oshima's message and a follow-up cable in even greater detail from his military aide were decoded by the United States and are included in the thousands of pages of broken Japanese cables just turned over to the National Archives by the supersecret National Security Agency.

At about the same time the United States was reading descriptions of Germany's coastal defences, it was also learning from many of the same cables about the supersecret German V-2 rocket weapon. Once again, messages from Oshima to Tokyo supplied some of the first clues.

"Germany's retaliation against England will come by rocket," Oshima told Tokyo in September, 1943. Oshima then went on to place the weapons at Peenemunde and Friedrichshafen; the first time the Allies had any idea of where to look for the whispered-about rockets.

On Nov. 10, 1943, just after he returned from his tour of Brittany and Normamdy, Oshima told Tokyo that the Germans had deployed 31 divisions along the French coast and were maintaining another 15 "mobile" divisions inland to respond to an invasion wherever it came. Oshima said 1.4 million Germans were ready to defend France.

Far more important than the numbers were Oshima's descriptions of the fortifications, including the exact number of Tiger and Panther tanks in reserve behind them, an invaluable piece of intelligence for the Allies.

Oshima said the keystone of the Germans' defences was the orchestration of their gun batteries to fire in unison at a single target, before switching again in unison to another target.

The Japanese dipolomat went on to blueprint the way German anti-tank ditches were arranged, where mines had been placed and anti-tank guns located. He pointed out in meticulous detail how gun emplacements were arranged and which were camouflaged and which were concealed.

Oshima said he was most impressed by the automatic grenade and flame throwers placed in the German fortifications. The grenade machine could "throw" 120 grenades a minute and the flame thrower could be fired remotely from a bunker 100 feet away.

In his follow-up message, Oshima's military aide, (a Lt. Col. Nishi) described which gun turrets along the coast were armored and which were screened from attack by barbed wire.

U.S. Go-Ahead On Ross Dam

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle City Light will proceed with plans to raise the height of Ross Dam, superintendent Gordon Vickery said Wednesday, because British Columbia is not serious about negotiations concerning the dam.

The City Light plan to add 36.6 metres to the top of the structure has been opposed by Canadians because it would flood 5,000 acres of B.C.'s Skagit Valley, about 145 kilometres east of Vancouver.

Provincial officials and city representatives have met off and on for several years in an effort to negotiate a settlement.

"I don't think the Canadians have any serious interest in negotiating," Vickery said. "I have not seen any indication in the meetings I have attended."

Errors In Chess

BAGUIO, Philippines (Reuter) — Champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi both made serious errors minutes before they adjourned the 22nd game of the world chess championship today.

Korchnoi threw away a reasonable position with black but Karpov then made inexplicable errors and lost his advantage.

Karpov leads by four wins to two in the search for six wins.

KILLING BLACK NETS $115 FINE

PRETORIA (AP) — A white man who killed a black man because the black brought him the wrong brand of cigarettes was sentenced Wednesday to pay a fine of $115 or serve 50 days in jail. Herman Louw, 27, was convicted on a charge of assault.

Court testimony shows that Louw and John Mokwena worked for a car rental agency. Louw told Mokwena to go buy him a pack of cigarettes and when Mokwena returned with the wrong brand, Louw hit Mokwena.

Magistrate W.J. Van den Berg said: "A reasonable man could not have foreseen that the blow Louw struck could possibly have led to Mr. Mokwena's death."

Oswald Murdered JFK For Recognition: Widow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lee Harvey Oswald's widow testified today that she believes Oswald assassinated President John F. Kennedy as an irrational attempt to seek recognition.

Marina Oswald Porter told the House of Representatives assassinations committee she believes Oswald acted alone because his secretive nature would not have allowed him to confide in anyone about an assassination plan.

In her testimony today and Wednesday, she stressed that she does not know for certain that Oswald was the assassin who shot Kennedy to death in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Questioned about motives, she replied: "If you want my personal opinion as to whether it's mental or political, I would have to say it's the mental state of the person. The whole matter is so irrational it's difficult for us to come up with any rational answer."

When Representative Richardson Preyer (Dem. N.C.) suggested that Oswald may have chosen to kill Kennedy because he thought assassinating "the man at the top," whatever his politics, would bring Oswald the recognition he had long sought and failed to achieve, Mrs. Porter said she found that plausible.

Committee members spent much of the morning quizzing Mrs. Porter about subtle differences between her current testimony and the accounts she gave the Warren Commission, the FBI, the secret service and author Priscilla Johnson McMillan.

For example, she testified Wednesday that she assumed from gossip that Russian authorities censored mail and bugged the apartment where she and Oswald lived in Minsk in the months after their marriage in April 1961. Mrs. McMillan's book about the Oswalds quotes her as saying a Soviet commissar told her the couple was under surveillance. She told the committee the McMillan account is correct and that she failed to recall the situation fully in her testimony.

Thinking's Run Aground Too

The provincial government probably would like the naggers and the doubters to go away please and stop bothering it about the Freelance affair, but the curious way it has been handled — let alone the circumstances of the incident itself — fairly demand further searching inquiry.

Both the Quest Star society of Victoria and Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf continue to gloss over the schooner's grounding on a Panamanian reef. They all but assign 100 per cent of the blame to the government of Panama, which is an example of strange reasoning if ever there was.

The San Blas Islands are Panama's and the coral reefs offshore where the Freelance piled up could be considered inside her territorial waters, but it is no more Panama's fault she sailed into the shallow waters than Canada is liable for damages because Panamanian-registered freighters frequently bash up on the rocks of B.C.'s west coast.

Bawlf said this week that a report he had commissioned from an experienced sailor found that a navigational error compounded by poor visibility (the Freelance was underway at night) led to the grounding. Agreed. But here occurs a parting of the ways between the government and common sense.

Because after the schooner ran aground local natives vandalized her, Bawlf says he is demanding compensation from Panama for the vessel, whose replacement value is set at nearly $1 million. The Cuna Indians bear some responsibility for what happened, but then so do the Quest Star society of Victoria and the government of British Columbia which rather freely handed over the tax dollars to buy the Freelance.

The natives did not sail her onto the reef, nor did they blast a hole in her side with dynamite in an attempt at refloating by clearing a channel in the coral. This last gambit really scuppered the Freelance. Until then, she could have been refloated. Whoever authorized or assented to such a risky move is also partly to blame.

The public is out $40,000 — the amount spent for electronic gear (some good that was in keeping the schooner out of shallow waters), crew travel to and from the Caribbean, salvage attempts, etc. — and the government appears satisfied to let off the Quest Star society which lost the money without even a reprimand.

Imagine if this were some group of welfare mothers who had let slip through their fingers a similar sum! Social Credit's righteous indignation would know no bounds. We'd see some right furious blame-laying and finger-pointing.

The only possible good to come out of this mess is that the government will in future demand a rather more careful accounting from the people to whom it makes donations of tax dollars, and insist upon a thorough investigation of their professional capabilities.

Keeping Secrets Secret

The resolution passed by the Greater Victoria school board this week to keep secret the agendas of all its closed meetings should have been entirely meaningless. The fact that it was not, that it was a matter of great controversy, is a symptom of a much deeper malaise within the board.

Traditionally in our system of local government, the only matters discussed in camera are those relating to land deals or to personnel issues — land deals because often the mention of them in public would touch off a flurry of speculation, personnel matters because they may affect the lives and careers of individuals. Everything else that is debated by publicly-elected bodies, goes the standard argument, is fair game for open, public discussion.

If the school board was playing by these rules, there would be no controversy over keeping the agenda secret. The agenda would consist of a list, probably short, of land matters and personnel matters to be dealt with, and nobody would suggest it should be made public.

The problem exists because the school board has adopted its own unwritten rules about what matters should be kept secret. Although it isn't possible to discover precisely what the board has been talking about behind closed doors, some subjects have apparently been the possible return of the strap in the school district, the future of the district's expensive media centre, and even ordinary budget planning.

It is difficult to relate any of these matters in any reasonably direct way to land deals or personnel issues — the suggestion that the discussion about the strap came about because of a letter from an individual teacher hardly seems to qualify it as a true personnel matter.

Rather to the jaundiced eye of the observer, it might seem that some members of the badly-split school board find it easier to deal with some of the most controversial matters to come before the board in secret instead of struggling through the impassioned public discussion they might spark.

But democracy is not required to be easy, and the public has the right to have such basic policy issues as school discipline and school district budgetting debated entirely in public, even if it is a lengthy and even unpleasant process.

There's nothing necessarily wrong with a rule that insists that agendas of secret meetings be kept secret. But there's a lot wrong with the school board that feels the need of pass such a rule because it is trying to do so much public business in secret.

The PQ Waits for Trudeau

QUEBEC — Prime Minister Trudeau's almost certain decision to postpone a federal general election until next year has stalled the Parti Quebecois government's referendum machine. The PQ desperately wants the federal election out of the way so that it can fix a timetable for its referendum on independence and get on with the job of selling sovereignty-association to the voters.

But reports last week suggested one of Trudeau's prime motivations in postponing an election is precisely to make life difficult for the PQ.

When he was elected in November 1976 Premier Rene Levesque said Quebec would hold a referendum on independence within two years. Last year the PQ revised its plans and targeted the spring or fall of 1979 for its referendum.

Referendum in 1980?

But now that they are faced with the possibility of a federal general election as late as July, 1979, some PQ officials are suggesting the referendum date could be pushed back into 1980.

For obvious reasons, the PQ does not want to hold the referendum too soon after a federal election. The two campaigns could become blurred in the eyes of politically-saturated voters in Quebec.

On the other hand, Premier Levesque has a provincial election of his own to reckon with sometime before the end of 1981. He does not want to schedule the referendum too close to the provincial election, since a referendum defeat would seriously compromise his government's chances for re-election.

If Trudeau holds off an election until next spring he will be stripping the gears on a PQ referendum machine that had been primed to start rolling this fall.

The party had planned to begin a door-to-door drive this fall and start spelling out in concrete terms what sovereignty-association means. A series of studies on economic association was to be released and presumably voters were finally going to find out what they would be asked to approve in the referendum.

But by postponing the federal election, Trudeau has frozen just about all this activity. The PQ is determined not to define the meaning of sovereignty-association until after the federal election, otherwise it would be furnishing Trudeau with all the material he needs for a "national unity" election campaign.

That would also get Trudeau off the hook for his economic record — the issue which stands to cause him the most trouble in an election.

PQ officials say the outcome of the federal election is crucial in determining the strategy they will use in the referendum campaign. They won't admit it, but they would love to see Trudeau's government replaced by a Joe Clark Conservative administration.

JOE CLARK
. . . PQ wants him as PM

A Conservative government would probably hold few seats in Quebec and would furnish the PQ with a good argument that the country is splitting along linguistic lines. And many PQ members feel Joe Clark would be a "soft touch" in dealing with Quebec compared to the obdurate Trudeau.

On the other hand, if the federal Liberals hang on to power by sweeping Quebec, the result could be interpreted as a repudiation of PQ policies.

According to PQ officials, the party's biennial convention next May will provide the final stamp of approval for the government's referendum proposals.

The referendum process itself would take about six months to unfold, which conceivably could allow the government to hold a late falls referendum next year after a campaign abbreviated by summer holidays.

If the government wanted a longer and more thorough campaign, as Premier Levesque has suggested, the referendum vote will be held as late as the spring of 1980.

Another reason for the government's repeated delays in defining sovereignty-association is that it hasn't really decided what it wants.

They Want Specifics

The principle of a sovereign Quebec, collecting its own taxes and sharing some economic powers with Canada in a common market arrangement, is clear. But the mechanics of a common or separate currency, a central or separate parliament are not.

As government ministers toured the province, they were being asked frequently by exasperated voters to define in concrete terms how sovereignty-association will work. The answers are still vague.

As one cabinet minister confided: "We want to keep the issue simple. We don't want to confuse the public with all sorts of technicalities."

But the government may be underestimating the political intelligence of Quebec voters who seem more than ever interested in specifics.

Claude Ryan's Liberals are running ahead of the PQ in the polls, even though Ryan's "third option" of renewed federalism is as yet undefined. The PQ risks losing momentum in the constitutional debate if it waits too long to make its positions clear.

But more than one observer has speculated that the PQ may be in the process of softening up its own option because "renewed federalism" is so popular in Quebec opinion polls.

Unemployment Shell Game

Sec. 62 (i) "In respect of each year, the (Unemployment Insurance) Commission shall fix the rates of the premium . . . so as to raise an amount equal to the adjusted basic cost of the benefit."

Sec. 63 (i) (c) "Basic account surplus means the amount, if any, by which the total sums credited at any time to the Unemployment Insurance Act exceed the total sums charged to that account."

—U.I. Act (revised) 1977

OTTAWA — That is the law. For years, Ottawa deliberately has broken it. As a result, employees and employers have been overcharged a couple of billion dollars in the unemployment insurance premiums that they paid.

If you or I did this, it would be called fraud. And we'd be in jail. Since Ottawa runs the jails and wrote the law, it is able to treat the law as an ass.

Yearly Surplus

As Sections 62 and 63 of the U.I. Act show, Ottawa is required each year to raise or lower employee-employer premiums depending upon whether the account into which they are paid is in surplus (premiums minus benefits) or in deficit.

Since the U.I. Act was passed in 1971, the employee-employer account has been in surplus almost every year. Yet premiums have never been reduced. At the end of 1977, for instance, the account overflowed with a surplus of $500 million. Yet 1978 maximum weekly employee premiums have been raised to $3.60 from $3.30 last year, while maximum employer premiums have been raised to $5.04 from $4.62.

It's a shell game. Each year, Ottawa either ignores its own law or retroactively changes the regulation to legitimize its fiddling of the figures.

How was it done? How, in particular, was it done so easily?

Most Canadians assume that the unemployment insurance fund consists of one large pot with a huge hole in it. In fact, there are two pots. The employer-employee pot is in fine shape. Last year it generated sufficient money in premiums both to pay out $2.3 billion worth of benefits and have $500 million left as loose change.

The second fund is not a pot at all but a sieve. Through its holes, Ottawa last year had to pour $1.8 billion of its own money.

The sieve and the pot were created by the new U.I. Act of 1971, after the finance department had peered at its crystal ball and had predicted that unemployment, in the decade to 1980, would average four per cent a year. All benefit costs incurred by a jobless rate of four per cent would be paid for by employee-employer premiums; Ottawa would be responsible for the trivial costs to be incurred whenever unemployment edged above four per cent.

As you may have noticed, and as one million jobless Canadians certainly have, unemployment is twice the rate forecast by the finance department. As a consequence, Ottawa has been doubly embarrassed: the employee-employer account, even though it now has to cope with benefit costs up to about the 5.5 per cent unemployment mark, is disgustingly healthy; Ottawa's own account, though, is terminally sick.

What to do? A naive question, that marks you as an outsider to Ottawa. Rob the employee-employer surplus to cover your own deficit, but quietly, is the answer.

Last week, Cullen said proudly that his "reforms" would reduce unemployment insurance expenses by $580 million next year. Under questioning, though, it became apparent that real cuts, in the sense that you or I would use that term of being achieved by tightening the rules, will amount to only $180 million. The saving that mattered would be to Ottawa itself — by shifting $400 million from the employee-employer pot to the government's own sieve.

Here's how you can find the pea in this shell game. The law requires Cullen to use the $500 million employee-employer surplus to reduce next year's premiums. Instead, he's using most of it to reduce his own costs and pretending that this transfer of costs from one pocket to another of the same taxpayer is part of the government's program to cut spending. To keep taxpayers from getting crabby, and to keep their eye off the pea, Cullen will leave $50 million to $100 million in the employee-employer pot, so that "premiums can be reduced in 1979."

Rigged Game

The game thus has been rigged so that Cullen will be able to claim credit both for cutting unemployment insurance by an amount that most people assume to be a sizeable $560 million, and to claim credit for reducing premiums. Neat. Provided the public doesn't catch on that Ottawa can do this only by breaking its own law.

At a guess, the $180 million "real" saving in unemployment insurance costs will never happen. Opposition politicians and interest groups will be able to blunt most of these cuts by citing genuine, hard-luck cases as they did with the 1976 proposed cuts to the unemployment insurance scheme which started out as $250 million worth and which ended up as virtually nil. The one saving that will survive, and which is the only one Ottawa really cares about will be achieved by shifting $400 million in costs from the government's shoulders to those of employees and employers. Cullen may call this a saving. I call it a fraud.

Starving Artist

As an uncertified but highly qualified visual artist I am dismayed by government and municipal entry into the arts. They have poured our money into expensive community schools, centres and colleges and expect the key person, the artist, to teach in them for nothing or very little.

The professional artist cannot afford to teach in these places. But this competition from the governments offering apparently cheap courses forces him to lower his prices. Thus unless the artist is very dedicated and accepts starvation wages the art service to the community either stops or reduces to a low quality.

Another case of inefficient high cost government services wrecking individual initiative. — Philip Wade, 4-569 Toronto Street.

Who Gets It?

On Sept. 7 I found a black wallet-type purse in the main post office on Government Street, which I handed over to one of the workers on counter duty. While filling out the details on my money order in this establishment, the thought crossed my mind as to what happens to this find in the event of it not being claimed by its owner.

I put this question to a counter person, who was quite vague and really did not know. My name and address were not asked for. I do not expect an accolade for being honest, but I do expect to receive this find, intact, on its not being claimed. Do you not agree? — Mrs. R. Sawatsky, 4338 Vera Cruz Place.

Support Couvelier

We are writing to give Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier our support and encouragement in his stand on the industrial development on Interurban Road. Although we are not altogether convinced Saanich needs an industrial park — mostly for the unpractical economic reasons at this time — if we are to have one, the Interurban site certainly makes the most sense from every point of view . . . and this way of doing it prevents the speculation and suspicion that surrounded the Royal Oak site. For this Couvelier is to be congratulated.

Also we think Mr. Laurenson's attitude and behaviour are definitely out of line in introducing the Royal Oak industrial site at this time, and in our opinion he leaves himself open to criticism.

We appreciate Couvelier's courage and the forthright way in which he has dealt with the many problems of his office. — Muriel and Jack Armstrong, 4353 Northridge Crescent.

Out of Step?

I am a new Canadian, born in San Francisco and have lived in Victoria for five years. My home town was founded June 29, 1776, under the flag of Spain by Juan Bautista de Anza. The tiny village of 1776, the raucous town of the gold rush era, and the present city (population 681,000; area 45 square miles) always was, and still is, under one unified municipal government.

The city has one mayor, six top officials (assessor, treasurer, etc.), judges and boards, all elected at large, and eleven supervisors (a few elected at large, the remainder by their districts). The board of supervisors corresponds to the Canadian municipal council and responds to the needs and requests of the city and its districts. There are nine regional agencies to which members are appointed by the board of supervisors. This relatively simple panel of officials successfully governs a unified city of 681,000 with far more needs, projects, and problems than Greater Victoria. The population of the surrounding metropolitan area (not unified) is 3,135,900 — about the size of metropolitan Montreal. So far as I know, all American cities, even the largest, have this type of unified city government.

Greater Victoria's population is about 169,000 and its area 58 square miles. It has four mayors, 32 aldermen, and four complete complements of departments (police, fire, school, health, welfare, etc.) with hundreds of employees. Nor is this all. Brooding over this four-square municipal anachronism is the Capital Regional Board with its 555 employees. All of this for a core population one-quarter that of San Francisco!

Though it helps to relieve unemployment, this very large bureaucracy is redundant and extremely expensive. People complain about high taxes but seem unwilling to accept a smaller, amalgamated, and more efficient city government. I believe that Greater Victoria's fragmented municipal government is the only one of its kind in Canada. Apparently all North American cities are out of step but Greater Victoria. — C. Crittenden, 503-890 Academy Close.

Nicaragua: Making Of Urban Guerrillas

LEON, Nicaragua — Miguel is a slightly built, 19-year-old with a nervous air and a fine-featured dark face. All his life he has lived with his parents in a poor neighborhood of Leon, Nicaragua's second largest city.

Until seven months ago, Miguel drove a truck to support his wife and two small sons. Now he is an urban guerrilla.

Last week Miguel volunteered to show three foreign reporters around his neighborhood where, he said, the residents fought the armed forces every night.

Miguel, who said he was under "strict orders" not to reveal his real name, met the foreign reporters at a university building in Leon. The walls were covered with Cuban posters and handwritten slogans, and the stairwell was piled with furniture to prevent police raiders from entering quickly.

No classes had been held at the university for some time. The students there would not allow their pictures to be taken or give their names. Two small groups had gathered in the auditorium under a huge banner saying, "Organize the masses to create the basic conditions for war and make war to push the political and organizational development of the masses."

While they were evasive about the activities going on in their buildings, the students were eager to tell reporters about activities of the National Guard, Nicaragua's combined police and armed forces.

They ticked off the names of people who had been arrested, the addresses of houses that had been raided and the streetcorners where their "martyrs" had fallen.

"Every night in the slums, the lights go off, the people put up barricades, bonfires are lit and lightning meetings are held," said one young man pointed out by the others as a spokesman. "Every morning the Guard takes down the barricades.

"The people have tried to put bombs in the barricades that will go off when the Guard tries to take them down, but they have not worked so far."

The reporters asked for more details. Was there anyone there whose house had been raided?

"My house is raided every day," came one response. It was Miguel.

"The guards come in and question my parents. They haven't found me yet. They won't get me alive," he said.

Miguel's neighborhood is called Coyolar. The streets are lined with adobe houses. Muddy alleys lead to privately owned "colonies" of wooden shacks that share one washtub with running water and a string of electric lights.

At every intersection paving stones had been taken out of the streets to slow down the National Guard's patrol jeeps. Trenches had been dug across the dirt roads.

Miguel, who had been tense and diffident at the university, obviously felt at home in Coyolar.

Pointing out children with distended bellies, piles of garbage, ramshackle outhouses, he repeated over and over again: "Take a picture of that. Show the Americans how we live in Nicaragua."

Miguel led the reporters down block after block pointing out the sites of skirmishes with the Guard, corralling residents to describe their lives.

As time passed, he occasionally forgot his "strict orders" not to talk about rebel activities. He let slip information about stealing weapons from stores, about making explosive devices at night, about smuggling guns into the neighborhood.

Miguel's ideology was vague, but his passion was directed at two clear targets — the poverty of his neighborhood and the National Guard.

He glared hotly at a portly man in a polo shirt sitting at a table on the other side of the room.

"That's Chepe," he said, and his glare grew even more intense. "He's a paid assassin, a plainclothes investigator for the National Guard. If he doesn't get who he's looking for, he kills their relatives. He'll never take me alive."

UNDER THOUSANDS OF FEET OF ICE

Radar Maps Buried Continent

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

CAMBRIDGE, England — For some 20 million years, a region of the world comparable in size to Europe has remained hidden under Antarctic ice. Now, systematic surveying with airborne radar is bringing to light its entombed mountains, ice-buried lakes — some more than 100 miles long — and deep troughs testifying to past upheavals in the earth's history.

Radar probing has shown that the Antarctic ice in places is more than 15,000 feet thick, but, here and there beneath it, are tablelands and great sedimentary basins similar to those of Australia and Africa. The three continents were a single land mass 60 millions years ago.

Although the covering ice sheet is relatively smooth, the landscape that has been revealed beneath it is, in some regions, extremely rugged. Along the 135th meridian, close to the western boundary of France's territorial claim, Adelie Land, a north-south escarpment has been discovered that is more than 8,200 feet high in some places and is 160 miles long.

Gamburtsev Mts.

East of it lies a trough with an ice-laden floor several thousand feet below sea level. David J. Drewry of the Scott Polar Research Institute here, in charge of the surveys, likens this great enlongated gash in the earth's crust to that of Lake Baikal in Siberia, the world's most voluminous body of fresh water.

The surveys, conducted with equipment carried by American aircraft, are a cooperative effort between the institute here, associated with the University of Cambridge, and the American research program financed by the National Science Foundation.

In east Antarctica, the vast continental block south of Australia and Africa, more than a million square miles of ice-buried terrain have already been mapped on a series of flight lines 30 to 60 miles apart. These have charted a series of mountains completely buried beneath the ice in the vicinity of the Soviet inland base, Vostok. They are known as the Gamburtsev Mountains.

The great valley east of the escarpment along the 135th Parallel has been tentatively named the Aurora Basin for the ship Aurora of the Australian explorer, Sir Douglas Mawson. A similar feature lying behind the coastal sector of the TransAntarctic Mountains has been called the Wilkes Basis, as it forms part of Wilkes Land.

Radar, seismic and magnetic measurements indicate that these basins are filled with sediment, in some places several miles deep, that was laid down by erosion when this region, welded to Australia and Africa, was free of ice and exposed to weathering in a less frigid latitude.

The radar probing also indicates that the great deposits of sediment under the floor of the Ross Sea, the southernmost extension of the world oceans, extend at least 60 miles inland under the grounded ice of Marie Byrd Land. Drilling into the sediment under the Ross Sea has suggested the presence there of oil deposits, another relic of the period before this region drifted near the South Pole.

A primary goal of ice sheet probing in West Antarctica is to aid in assessing the possibility of a "surge," a rapid slippage of a large section of ice into the sea that would raise global sea levels. West Antarctica is the region south of the Americas, and its cover of ice is regarded by some glaciologists as unstable.

A drill hole through the ice in the heart of that region of West Antarctic known as Marie Boyd Land has shown that part of the ice there rests on a lubricating layer of slush. According to Drewry, however, this is not true where the ice flows over buried peaks and domes, which may prevent the rapid slippage of a surge.

Mapping the magnetic properties of the rock beneath the ice in West Antarctica may help define the line of demarcation between the two plates of the earth's crust. It is suspected that the plates joined and, in doing so, possbly rotated to form the present continent. Originally, they were puzzle pieces in the supercontinent that broke up to form the land masses of the Southern Hemisphere.

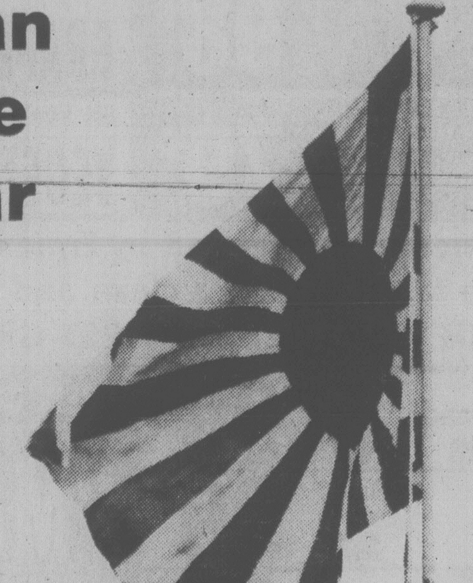
Ash Deposits?

One puzzling result of the radar probing is the evidence of layering within the ice. Some of it may be caused by volcanic ash deposits laid down over the millions of years that have elapsed while the Antarctic ice was accumulating and flowing to the sea.

But drilling into the ice so far has not revealed enough volcanic layers to account for the observations, and it is suspected that they reflect periods when special climatic conditions were depositing other contaminants, such as salt, or producing layers of unusual density.

The layers tend to follow contours of the buried mountains, but in the deepest region of ice the layers have been wiped out. Drewry said that he suspected this was because the ice there had been churned up as it flowed over the rock beneath it.

Rearmed Japan Raises Spectre Of Trading War



The Economist

It has taken a third of a century for it to happen, but Japan is rejoining the ranks of the countries that take defence seriously.

Until recently the country has lived behind an American shield — spending less than one per cent of its GNP on defence — while it has rebuilt its economy by brilliant market-orientated technology.

Now it is starting to rearm, and the rearmament is likely to proceed surprisingly quickly . . . The Japanese have come to realize that they had better provide the essentials of their own security. The signs of impending American defeat in Vietnam started to drag them in that direction in the early 1970s. After Vietnam came sharp cuts in the American Pacific Fleet, the announcement of the intended withdrawal of American ground forces from Korea, and an increasing concentration of American power and interest on the NATO central front in Germany . . . .

Japan . . . needs new tanks, anti-tank weapons and a whole new air defence system (remember how easily that defecting Russian Foxbat slipped through the present one?).

So far Japan is getting its military equipment the cost-effective way: spending very little on research and development (only about 1.7 per cent of its defence budget), and catching up rapidly with the advanced military countries by buying the best technology from the United States . . . But it could all too easily fall into the trap that has already snared much of NATO Europe — the trap of spending too much money rediscovering wheels that the Americans have already built, just to give its own industries some home-grown designs to make.

Japan should resist this temptation, and concentrate on things it can do particularly well and nobody else is already doing . . . In new electronic weapons, there are probably great advances to be made . . . .

But here a second problem looms. Some day Japan will want to reverse its long-standing ban on arms exports.

If Japan yields to the temptation of large research and development spending, the pressures to increase foreign sales in order to amortize these costs will mount. This could result in a trade war in arms much more explosive than the ones in those desirable Japanese cars and television sets, and with much more awkward political implications.

The non-communist world needs a Japan that can take as much responsibility for defending its own territory as, say, a non-nuclear West European country does. It does not need a Japanese current account surplus swollen beyond the present $17 billion by arms sales to all sorts of unexpected commercial customers. Accommodating a Japanese defence industry could prove to be one of the western world's more difficult challenges for the rest of the century.

Cabaret Regains Licence; Prostitutes Worry Council

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police will have to determine if prostitutes are frequenting the Penthouse cabaret, which has been granted a new business license, one of its owners said Wednesday.

City council voted 6 to 4 Wednesday to restore the business license of Celebritiy Enterprises Ltd, which owns the nightclub.

The licence was suspended in December, 1975, after the Philliponi family, Celebrity's owners, was charged with living off the avails of prostitution at the Penthouse.

They were found not guilty of the charges by the Supreme Court of Canada in December, 1977, after they appealed lower-court convictions.

Council voted 8 to 2 in a closed meeting last April not to issue the licences. The British Columbia Supreme Court later quashed that decision and ordered council to reconsider the applications and give Celebrity a chance to present its case.

Joe Philliponi, former Celebrity president, said the establishment could reopen within several weeks and sees no difficulty in getting the necessary provincial liquor licence.

He said police will have to determine if there are any prostitutes in the cabaret. "We don't know who they are," he said.

Lawyer Angelo Branca, representing Celebrity, told council that it wants to obey the law but it was useless for police to tell them when prostitutes are in the club.

"How can you go up to a lady who is a patron and say 'Here, you're a prostitute' or that 'The police have told us you're a prostitute. Get out.' We would have people suing us by the hundreds," Branca said.

Council adopted a suggestion by Mayor Jack Volrich that council have an independent manager for three months, at which time the licence would be reveiwed.

Volrich said the Penthouse had acquired "a questionable reputation" over the years, but at issue is its future management.

Alderman Bernice Gerard said that for the Penthouse to restore its reputation "is going to be like the Pacific Ocean trying to prove that it's not wet."

RATHIE RUNS FOR MAYOR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Rathie, Vancouver mayor from 1963 to 1966, has returned to politics as a candidate in this year's mayoralty contest.

He said he has notified the Non Partisan Association of his decision, the group that endorsed him when he first ran as an alderman in 1959.

Rathie said one of the main points of his program will be rapid transit, a system that makes use of buses rather than rail which, he said, has not been successful according to U.S. studies.

Ward System Goes to Voters

VANCOUVER (CP) — City voters will be given the chance to accept or reject a ward system of electing aldermen when they go to the polls in the Nov. 15 civic election.

City council voted Tuesday to include the question on civic ballots.

The Canadian Press distributed an erroneous report Wednesday that Mayor Jack Volrich had voted in favor of the plebescite, when he actually voted against it.

Do They Own The Land . . .?

KELOWNA (CP) — Twenty-six shareholders in a land company they thought owned a 200-acre parcel in nearby Peachland have been given preliminary approval to subdivide the property by the Central Okanagan Regional District.

But final approval depends on their receiving title to the property from the landowners, the chairman of the district said Wednesday.

J.H. Stuart said in an interview that district directors have voted to approve the request by shareholders of Paradise Lake Estates on compassionate grounds, although it contravenes many planning regulations.

He said shares in the company were sold in 1968 to the 26 people but the landowners who established the company never passed title to the land to the company.

Technically, he said, the landowners could have sold the property leaving the shareholders, some of them now residents, with nothing.

He said the landowners, who he did not identify, agreed eight or nine months ago to deliver title to the land to the company, but have not yet done so.

Treaty Worries Montana

CRANBROOK (CP) — Some United States politicians want out of the Columbia River Treaty and opposition to the Kootenay River diversion plan in British Columbia might help them, Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday.

The proposed diversion, still being studied by B.C. Hydro, would be permitted under the Columbia River Treaty after 1984 and would draw water from the Columbia system that now provides power in the United States.

No decision has been made to proceed but Bennett said the diversion remains a strong negotiating point with the U.S. governments and could involve the Skagit Valley flooding proposal of Seattle City Light.

Under the Columbia treaty, the provincial government after 1984 can divert Columbia waters and Bennett said Montana Governor Thomas Judge, who visited Victoria during the summer for talks on the issue, fears his state would lose essential irrigation water and other downstream benefits from the Columbia system.

Medicare: No Signing

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government has scrapped its plan to require patients to sign Medicare claim forms when they visit a doctor.

Jim Gilmore, B.C. Medical Association (BCMA) spokesman, said Wednesday that the government backed down on its order for signatures in an out-of-court settlement with the association.

The move came Tuesday just before Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz was to have ruled in B.C. Supreme Court on allegations by the BCMA that the signature requirement was a breach of contract on the part of the Medical Services Commission which administers the medical plan.

Gilmore said the government also has agreed to reconsider BCMA pleas for plastic identification cards for patients covered under the medical plan.

"The paper cards can be easily altered and if there is a fraudulent claim it is the doctor's responsibility, not the medical plan's problem," he said.

He said there is no intention that the patient would receive a copy of the doctor's bill under the plastic card plan.

The BCMA also has agreed to expand its patterns of practice committee — a watchdog on doctors' billings — to include two or three members of the government and at least one member of the public.

SUSPECT DISCHARGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of two men accused of second-degree murder in a convenience store robbery has been committed for trial in provincial court while the other has been discharged.

Judge David Moffett ruled after a five-day preliminary hearing there was insufficient evidence to link Jean Pierre Patry, 34, to the June 14 fatal shooting of Eric Armand DeSmeth. Raymond Arthur Malkin, 30, was committed for higher court trial.

Teacher Suspended Again

COQUITLAM (CP) — A teacher who was reinstated by the Coquitlam school board after being suspended following a marijuana conviction has now been suspended for failing to show up for the new school term.

The school board suspended Dennis Hilton, 29, an auto mechanics teacher at Centennial school, at a closed meeting Tuesday night, board chairman Eunice Parker said Wednesday.

Hilton was suspended from teaching Feb. 28 after being given a conditional discharge for a possession of marijuana conviction. He was reinstated last month after a Crown appeal against the discharge was dismissed.

The Crown appealed the conditional discharge sentence on the grounds that it was inappropriate and inadequate.

Education Minister Pat McGeer said later that teachers convicted of drug offences will have their teaching certificates revoked.

The school board in this Vancouver suburb sent Hilton a letter telling him to return to Centennial, but Hilton never showed up for classes when they resumed last week, Mrs. Parker said.

"The board has moved to suspend him for neglect of duty."

Hilton's lawyer told the board last week that the teacher is vacationing in England and has a medical certificate signed by his doctor telling him "to leave the district for eight to 12 weeks," Mrs. Parker said.

"I suppose the medical reasons would hinge on the upset on the marijuana thing."

The lawyer, Ted Seifred, told the board that Hilton would return to teaching when he returned from his vacation, Parker said, "but we felt this wasn't sufficient."

Hilton has six days to appear before the board, Mrs. Parker said. The board must either reinstate or fire him seven days following that appearance.

CASSIAR STRIKE SET

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the United Steelworkers of America have served 72-hour strike notice on Cassiar Asbestos Corp. at its British Columbia operation 80 kilometres south of the Yukon boundary.

Although the notice expires Friday, the 546 workers must wait until government officer Peter Dowding reports out of the dispute.

At issue is a company decision to offer no wage increase to 71 office and technical employees, represented by one local of the steelworkers. The 475 production workers are represented by another Steelworker local.

The union said that office workers voted 92 per cent to reject the company proposal to freeze wages for at least two years, while production workers voted 99 per cent against the company's offer for a nine-per-cent increase over two years.

Average rate for office staff now is $9.80 an hour and for production staff $9.12 an hour.

Cassiar general manager Brian Pewsey said the company wants to bring office and technical staff wages and vacation terms into line with lower production and maintenance rates.

Production rates start at $7.60 an hour and climb to $10.83 an hour in 19 steps, while office and technical staff start at $7.52 an hour and rise to $13.22 in 15 steps.

A union spokesman said the proposal would cut wages for new employees an averag $1.06 an hour, and would re duce annual vacations to tw weeks from four.

60-80% Jobless Forecast

VERNON (CP) — An unemployment rate of between 60 and 80 per cent for men in the North Okanagan construction industry was forecast Wednesday by union and manpower officials.

Bill DeWilde, financial secretary and dispatcher with the Okanagan District Council of Carpenters, said he expects the percentage of unemployed carpenters to jump to between 60 and 80 per cent by Christmas from the current 18 per cent.

Coupled with expected winter layoffs at two British Columbia Hydro projects at Revelstoke and Trail and the slump in the local building industry, DeWilde said as many as 250 of the 350 union carpenters in Vernon will be out of work.

Jack Roddis, manager of the Vernon Manpower office, said laborers and related tradesmen can expect a similar unemployment rate even though unemployment in the construction trade is low at the moment.

"The unemployment rate right now is the lowest it's been for years—not because the job situation is that good, but because construction men are finding work elsewhere," Roddis said.

Tube Misplaced, Anaesthetist Says

VANCOUVER (CP) — A plastic tube carrying life-sustaining oxygen was found to be misplaced about 20 minutes after a woman admitted to hospital for the removal of bunions began showing a critically slow heartbeat, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

Clarice Gertrude Gelblum, 57, died in the intensive care unit at Vancouver General Hospital July 15, five days after the incident that occurred while she was being prepared for an operation on her toes.

Anaesthetist Dr. Paul Darimont testified that shortly before Mrs. Gelblum was to be taken into the operating room, and after she had been injected with various drugs and connected by a plastic tube to an artificial breathing apparatus containing a mixture of oxygen and nitrous oxide, he noticed her lips were blue and she had an abnormally slow pulse.

Emergency measures, including the assistance of other anaesthetists, the injection of drugs to stimulate the heart and heart massage, were undertaken, he said.

Darimont said that as soon as untoward symptoms occurred, the oxygen-nitrous oxide mixture was changed to pure oxygen.

Finally, after a swelling in Mrs. Gelblum's stomach was noticed, the tube that was supposed to lead to her lungs was checked and found to be in the throat passage leading to the stomach rather than to the lungs.

"A minute or so" after the tube was placed in the trachia leading to the lungs, Mrs. Gelblum's condition stabilized, Darimont said.

Dr. Ronald Evelyn, head of the intensive care unit, testified that when Mrs. Gelblum was transferred to his care, it turned out she had already received "profound brain damage" and for the next five days, while connected to life-support equipment, her condition gradually deteriorated. He said the deterioration occurred despite care, including the injection of drugs and cooling the head with ice, "directed at minimizing the effect on the brain of inadequate oxygen."

The inquest was told that the brain would begin to deteriorate if totally deprived of oxygen after about four minutes. Darimont said it could not be said with certainty how fast the brain would deteriorate if only receiving a partial supply of oxygen.

Pathologist Dr. Thomas Harmon said the ultimate cause of death was bronchial pneumonia.

2,4-D Halt Urged By Indians

VERNON (CP) — A local Indian band has asked the provincial government not to proceed with chemical treatment of Eurasian milfoil weed in the north arm of Okanagan Lake.

Lyle Brewer, manager for the North Okanagan Indian band, said in a letter to the provincial water investigations branch offices here that the band council strongly objects to application of the herbicide 2,4-D in a 15-acre area of the lake.

Brewer said the council decided against the application because of "a lack of certainty in regards to the hazardous effects the application of 2,4-D may have to the immediate area."

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Gambling stocks rolled up some more dramatic gains Thursday while the rest of the market languished amid uneasiness over inflation and the struggling dollar.

Gambling stocks, which had built up some steep gains in the last three sessions, soared again. Caesars World, which held ground-breaking ceremonies Wednesday for a casino in Atlantic City, gained 4⅝ to $64 on the NYSE. And Del E. Webb, announced that it had bought a hotel property on the Atlantic City boardwalk, picked up 3¾ to $35½.

The dollar took a sharp drop against leading foreign currencies Wednesday, and lost a bit more ground in early activity today.

G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told a seminar in Washington on Wednesday that the dollar's slump had added a full point to the U.S. inflation rate over the last 12 months.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices were moderately higher at the close of active trading on the London stock market.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 535.5, up 1.2, after falling back from a noon high of 539.3.

Wescorp Ind.

Wescorp Industries Ltd. of Vancouver reported a net profit of $1,027,000 or $5.57 a share for the six months ended June 30, compared with $742,000 or $4.02 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Revenue was $21,084,000, compared with $13,276,000.

There was an extraordinary item in the first six months of this year at $202,000 or $1.10 a share which was a reduction in income tax resulting from the utilization of prior years losses.

"Revenue growth is primarily attributed to the company's housing division, consisting of Homexpo Canada Exports Ltd. and Mariner Homes Ltd., and their completion of two housing projects in Saudi Arabia," said president David C. Pegg.

He said the firm's insurance division, Pafco Insurance Co., continues to meet competition and "volumes of business and profitability have declined."

'Guts' Needed to Give Region Control of Water

Control over regional water supplies should be in regional hands but nobody has the political guts to do anything about it, says Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell.

Commenting on a suggestion from Saanich Ald. John Mika that the regional district approach member municipalities with a view to taking over water distribution, regional libraries and grant allocations, Campbell Wednesday described the Greater Victoria water district as an anachronism that has outlived its usefulness.

A number of municipalities recently turned down a bid by the regional district to acquire letters patent for grant allocation.

Western communities have asked the regional district to take over water supply without success but Campbell said if Saanich Peninsula representatives want to start a move to have water distribution regionalized, they will get a good deal of support.

"This would then be a request from components rather than from board directors and perhaps we could deal with it with some hope of acceptance," Campbell said.

He said all matters that affect more than one regional component could be dealt with on a regional basis more effectively and economically than by the components themselves.

"But it is quite clear that it is not politically popular for regional districts to seize or attempt to seize duties or responsibilities from components," he added.

He recommended the board seek to expand its responsibilities but remain ready to consider requests from components to assume further duties.

Campbell said he does not think it politically feasible to amalgamate the library on a regional basis because the service provided on the peninsula and in the western community by another library is better and more popular than the Greater Victoria Public Library.

"There is a lesson in that that the Greater Victoria library board ought to understand. They are totally unaccceptable to outlying communities," Campbell said.

A Pox on All Crossed Wires

VANCOUVER (CP) — Callers phoning the provincial public health offices here recently got more than the results of their blood tests — they got a crash course in venereal diseases.

It was a case of crossed wires.

Whether it was a doctor checking on the incidence of congenital heart defects in the province, a future filing clerk calling in for the results of a pre-employment medical, or an anxious daughter reporting dissatisfaction with care given an elderly mother in a nursing home, there was the same brisk female voice in the background, giving a quick run-down on syphilis, gonorrhea or crabs, what symptoms to watch for, what preventive or corrective steps to take — "have regular checkups, particularly after every change of partners".

It took two visits by British Columbia Telephone Co. repairmen to correct the malfunction, says Ginny Rush, of the venereal disease clinic.

Camosun Nurses Are First

Test scores released by the Council of Practical Nurses show the 29 Camosun graduates in first place with a 17-point average separating them from the second-ranked B.C. college.

The average mark Canada-wide was just under 500, the B.C. average student score was 552 and the figure for practical nurses graduating at Camosun was 590, said Vic Ricard, chairman of the council board of governors.

RECORD BLEEDING NOT ENOUGH

An above-average number of blood donors has been turning up at Red Cross House clinics this week but not enough to keep the hospitals happy.

A total of 619 persons has donated blood since Monday.

"Turnouts have been excellent, but the problem is that since Labor Day donations have been below average and hospitals have just enough supplies to fill their needs," he said. "They are just scraping through."

He said 234 attended the clinic at Camosun College Interurban Road campus Wednesday — the largest turnout ever.

The previous record at Camosun was 201, he said.

A clinic is being held from 3 to 8 p.m. today at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, Sooke, and on Friday one will be held at Victoria City Hall from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"We hope a large number donors will turn up at Friday's clinic - the last for this month," he said. "We would like to see at least 600 donors to make up for the poor turnouts earlier this month." said.

COIN DISPLAY ON WEEKEND

The Victoria Numismatic Society will hold its coin show Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Georgian Room of the Empress Hotel.

Derek Smith, general manager of the Royal Canadian Mint in Winnipeg, will be a special guest. He will display the 1978 Canadian gold coin and a special mint production display. He will be at the show both days to show the mint displays and answer questions from the public.

Taking part in Coin Show '78 will be dealers from western Canada and the United States, buying and selling numismatic material.

There will be eight categories — Canadian coins, world coins, B.C. numismatics, tokens and medals, paper money, single item, specialized, and junior display.

Fred Laidlaw, society president, says a great deal of time and research goes into preparation of the displays, as owners compete for trophies and awards.

Smith will present the awards at an invitational breakfast Sunday, hosted by the society and the provincial government.

The society is a non-profit hobby club, meeting every month at the Provincial Museum. It encourages people to collect money, medals and tokens, trade numismatic items and learn about them.

The show is open to the public.

Liquid Gold Turns Out Rather Leaden

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Did the Tamahnous Theatre cast of Liquid Gold leave its energy (for which it has been loudly praised by mainland critics) at home when it took to the road under Canada Council Touring Office sponsorship?

One had to conclude at Wednesday's first of two performances at McPherson Playhouse that such was the case. Either that or the unaccustomed size and traditional features of the McPherson defeated the company's usual style, which at previous Victoria Belfry performances — 84 Acres for example — could fairly be called scorching rising to frenetic.

In fact this was a peculiarly uneven performance throughout.

The vitality needed to put this kind of tongue-in-cheek farce-melodrama material over evolved now and then in the musical numbers, only to lapse in lengthy dialogue episodes.

In this connection neither Richard Newman as rum-runner king Moon Morgan, nor Tom Braidwood as the conniving dealer, Wheeler, could be faulted. Both maintained effective characterizations and vigor at a consistent level.

Liquid Gold's script by Kitimat-born Glen Thompson, set in 1921, is entertainingly farcical and contains cogent commentary on opportunism and acquisitiveness confronted by the good guys' and gals' honesty and loyalty. The setting, which is excellently contrived, is a waterfront dock area in Envers Inlet, a fictional backwater of the Sechelt Peninsula.

The characters are fisherfolk, spider-like store-keeper Mort Wheeler spinning a web of credit to enslave the simple souls; a stupid Mountie in the "pay" of Wheeler, his principal bribe being a basket of carrots for his horse; a good-hearted prostitute, the rum-runner and a tough but honorable fisherwoman named Sophie McCafferty.

The trouble lies in the unevenness not only of energy and tempo, but in the fact that Jeremy Long's direction appears to be sloppy on this occasion. There is a complete lack of bite and emphasis through pacing and timing and scenes where the mood changes from mockery to sentiment are poorly handled, the cast members, particularly Suzie Payne as Sophie and Jackie Crossland as Susannah, seeming suddenly lost in limbo.

Liquid Gold will be repeated tonight at 8 p.m.

Bawlf Denies Drug Connection

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf Wednesday denied having any association with anyone dealing in drugs.

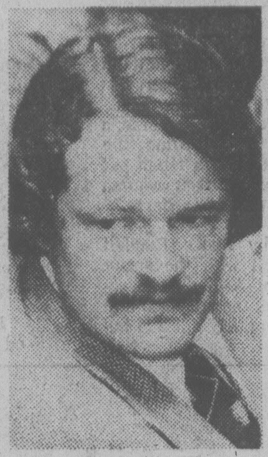
He told a news conference nagging rumors that he has been involved in drugs have dogged him all his political life.

"The sources of the rumors were twisted minds who had attached derogatory or even sinister motives to my involvement in Old Town," Bawlf said.

The minister said nine years ago when he was only 25, he began renovations in what was then the skid road area of Victoria.

Because he dealt in that area of the city and because success always has its detractors he became aware of what he called "very vicious rumors being circulated that I was some kind of crook who was financing my building projects out of the proceeds of the drug trade, and all sorts of other absurd allegations."

Bawlf said all his financial dealings have been a matter of public record with the inspector of companies, the registrar of companies and with the land registry.



BAWLF
. . . 'unfair'

"I was not in any way associated with anybody involved in drug dealings."

Asked if he used drugs, Bawlf replied that answering that question was like answering if he still beats his wife.

Pressed by reporters, he replied: "I was young once. Too long ago. I know what the experience of the 1960s was because I was in university then."

The rumors about his drug dealings peaked during the 1975 election campaign, he said.

After he was elected, he made known all the allegations to newly-appointed Attorney-General Garde Gardom early in 1976.

At the same time, a letter writing campaign making the same allegations prompted police authorities to initiate an investigation.

Bawlf said he laid all his affairs open for scrutiny and within a couple of months, police returned with the conclusion that it was just unsubstantiated rumor and innuendo.

"It was an absurd set of allegations and at that point as far as I was concerned, and I'm sure the authorities were concerned, the matter was at rest."

Later that year he was appointed to the cabinet and there was likely another routine security check, he said, but during the ensuing months the rumors persisted in some cases in the hands of "people who should know better."

Regarding James Buckner using his name during a county court trial on conspiracy to traffic in hashish, Bawlf said a defendant is entitled to use any defence he can mount, without comment from outside the courtroom.

But Bawlf did say Buckner was apparently aware of the 1976 police inquiries and was able to drag them into a trial as a kind of a red herring.

Bawlf said he is defenseless against such actions.

"It has been difficult enough being a single parent raising two small children and trying to muster the long hours that go with this job and shoulder the responsibilities and stresses that normally go with a cabinet job and then to have on top of this a most unfortunate and unfair set of allegations," he said.

(Bawlf and his wife recently separated.)

Bawlf said he does not anticipate taking any civil action against Buckner.

Buckner was convicted Wednesday of conspiracy to traffic in cannabis resin and possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking. (See story page 24.)

Asked if he thinks the publicity will affect his chances at the polls, Bawlf said he has done his best to contribute to public life and is prepared to stand on his record.

Firebombing Arrest Made

A 23-year-old man has been arrested in the firebombing attack on an elderly couple's home over the Labor Day weekend.

The man is to appear in provincial court charged with criminal negligence causing bodily harm and arson.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the Victoria police detectives unit, said a warrant was issued for the arrest Wednesday afternoon.

The man turned himself in to police at 7:30 p.m.

The charges stem from an early morning incident Sept. 3 when a gasoline-filled pop bottle was set on fire and hurled through the bedroom window of the 1136 Empress home of Artem Sokalski, 76, and his wife Mary, 71,.

The Sokalskis, who were in bed at the time, barely managed to get out of the room. Mrs. Sokalski suffered minor burns to her face trying to extinguish the flames.

The fire caused about $2,000 damage.

Sokalski said later the attack was in reprisal to numerous complaints the couple has made to police in the past six months about noisy parties in their neighborhood.

Stewart praised detectives Blake Green and Doug Richardson.

"It was a very difficult investigation. A lot of leg work went into it. They did a good job."

Shells Halt Cleanup

The provincial government has suspended its Eurasian milfoil cleanup program in the Okanagan Valley's Kalamalka Lake after three live mortar shells were scooped up along with the weeds.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said today in view of the danger the cleanup will stop until the lake has been swept clean by the federal department of defense.

Nielsen said the danger is too great to the scuba divers and machine operators.

B.C. Eyes Control Of Local Budgets

are publicly elected bodies with set responsibilities.

After the meeting, Wolfe was asked if the government is contemplating controls similar to those brought in by former premier W. A. C. Bennett that limited assessment increases on land to no more than 10 per cent a year.

"We are examining what opportunities there are," he said. "The property taxation committee of cabinet, which has six members, is looking at all the possibilities of restraining the growth of school and municipal budgets."

Wolfe admitted that he is chairman of the committee and said other members are Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair but refused to say how long the study has been going on or when a policy would be announced.

Contacted outside the meeting, Don Morton, chairman of the assessment authority, said he is unaware of the study but added that he did not think it possible for the government to bring back control over assessments.

Nip in the Air Titillates Tubbers

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What's better than a hot tub and a glass of wine?

Such a hot tub has been built by three Victoria men who call themselves The Original Vintner's Hot Tub Company.

It began when Andrew Penn, 24, returned from Britain where he was a medical student at Cambridge University and tried to get a job. There were none. He even tried to get a job in a mortuary, thinking his medical background would be an asset.

Finally, he found work at Jordan and Ste. Michelle Cellars Ltd. on Quadra just before the winery moved to Surrey.

The elder Penn says he became interested in hot tubs when he was in Britain after reading an article in a medical journal extolling the benefits gained from such watering spas as the ones at Bath.

He became even more interested after reading how hot tubs are becoming the rage in California, the ones being made of discarded California wine barrels being the "Cadillacs" of the business.

The trio completed the first hot tub three weeks ago, inatalling it adjacent to the back patio of a friend's home at 1383 Mount Newton.

The pungent aroma of wine filled the air when the Times dropped in. Built of half a barrel, it's 10 feet wide, 12 feet high and made of three-inch thick Douglas fir that has had 20 years to soak up its aromatic fragrance.

"It has seating for 12 and you could probably squeeze in 20. It's been pretty well stacked since we got it in," Briony, the Penns' sister, said.

Outfitted with a circulatory pump, propane heater and filter, the tub has a whirlpool that gives a good back massage, she said.

Her brothers and Young have about 30 old barrels they intend to make into hot tubs and the elder Penn says people like internationally-known flutist Paul Horn are interested.

Penn will return to Cambridge soon to finish his last two years of medical school, his brother will continue flying while Young will take time out from university to promote the tubs.

They say sitting in the "biggest hot tub in town" after a busy day is hard to beat, especially when the odd shower makes the 105-degree water even more enjoyable.

Ambulance Checkup

Saanich aldermen are keeping a close eye on the new provincial Emergency Health Services Commission (EHSC) following reports of slow ambulance response time, Ald. Robert Cameron said today.

Cameron, chairman of the fire committee, said he and another alderman had heard of a few cases where the response was slower than it should be "and we just want to make sure that they're isolated incidents.

AirWest Traffic Slips

Passenger traffic on AirWest has dropped 30 to 35 per cent since the Labor Day weekend, but an official says the Sept. 2 fatal crash in Vancouver isn't the main cause.

Dick Laidman, AirWest general manager, said Wednesday there is always a drop in passenger traffic after the Labor Day weekend, especially on the West Coast.

Airlines can look to a 25 per cent drop, he said, so AirWest is likely experiencing a seven to 10 per cent reduction in the number of passengers because of the accident which claimed 11 lives.

Laidman said there is a natural hesitancy against flying an airline that has had some trouble, but it soon wears off.

AirWest is not expecting any permanent loss of passenger volume because of the crash, he said.

The airline is about to implement its winter schedule which will see the 15 daily flights each way reduced to about eight or 10.

AirWest consolidated a number of its regularly scheduled flights in recent days. Others have been flying empty or with only a handful of passengers.

The airline has also substituted smaller Beavers for the 17-passenger Twin Otters on some flights.

Ask The Times

Q. I am interested in learning invisible mending. Could you please tell me where I could buy reweaving needles. S.B.

A. There is nobody in the Greater Victoria area that teaches invisible mending. One professional mender who has been in the business for 30 years says it's a costly and lengthy undertaking. The Victoria Needlecraft Centre at 1863 Oak Bay Avenue will have reweaving needles in stock in a month's time.

Boosted Activity Forecast Here In Construction

Things are bad for the construction industry in Victoria — and the winter will be tough — but there are better days ahead, industry spokesmen say.

Dave Weller, manager of the Construction Association of Victoria, said unemployment in the building trades industry may peak at 30 per cent — about 2,000 tradesmen — this winter and then decline.

By contrast, the province-wide jobless rate in construction is expected to hit 50 per cent over the winter.

Weller said local tendering has picked up considerably during the past four weeks and this will result in a number of projects getting under way by spring.

"I think we will see considerable improvement by mid-1979."

However, a full recovery may not come until 1980 or 1981, he said.

Farmer Construction president Wayne Farmer agreed with this estimate and expressed confidence Victoria will have a full recovery by 1981.

"There is a definite improvement," Farmer said. "We have more going on than at this time last year."

He said government and other institutional construction work has been cushioning the blow of a slack pace of building by private enterprise.

Projects under way or about to begin include two hospitals, several schools and renovations at the Legislative Buildings.

Farmer said many investors foresee a Victoria boom within three years and foreign developers are already coming to the area looking for sites for new commercial projects.

"Investors want to get in now because they need at least a two-year lead time for construction."

Farmer said he knew of investors from Germany, the United Kingdom and Australia, all looking for commercial opportunities in the region.

Japanese investors are also expected here, he said.

Foreign money is attracted to North America because of the declining cost of the U.S. and Canadian dollar, he said, and Victoria is favored because investors believe it will recover faster than most other areas.

"The consensus is we will have a complete recovery by 1981 and they want to get in now so they can participate in it."

Farmer said the investors are looking for all types of commercial opportunities, including sites for shopping centres.

But, while full recovery may not be far away, there will be some tough months ahead for the industry, he said.

Farmer, honorary treasurer of the Canadian Construction Association, said he was not surprised that a study by the B.C. Construction Association showed provincial construction industry unemployment could hit 50 per cent this winter.

The association said there were 15,509 of the province's 64,000 building trades employees collecting unemployment insurance in August.

In March the total had been 25,430.

Farmer said the 50 per cent forecast could come true for B.C. as a whole but Victoria will not be hit as hard.

The jobless rate in construction trades here likely will run at about 30 per cent over the winter, which is high but lower than in recent years.

Water Driller Dies After Rig Shifts

Brian Slade was pinned under a rear metal grate when the rig shifted. Despite the efforts of his brother, Paul, 19, who was working with him, Brian died a short time later.

A Shawnigan Lake RCMP spokesman said the mishap occurred about 3:45 p.m. on a housing site on the Port Renfrew Road about seven kilometres west of the West Shawnigan Lake Road turnoff.

The brothers, employees of Drillwell Enterprises, owned by their father, Kenneth Slade, also of Duncan, were setting up the rig preparing to drill.

The police spokesman said Brian was not satisfied with the way the rig was positioned and was attempting to reset the blocks in soft dirt under the drill truck when the unit rolled back four or five inches.

Paul was in another truck at the time and when he saw what happened rushed over and pried up the grate with a shovel.

The spokesman said Brian regained consciousness, said something to his brother, and then lapsed into a coma.

Paul radioed for help over a citizen's band radio. Their father was contacted and raced to the scene where both he and Paul attempted to revive Brian.

"I've been in the business 30 years and there's never been a serious accident like this," he said. "It was a freak accident."

Brian, well known in the Duncan area, was a rugby player and had played in a game last Sunday.

Changes In Bus Routes Studied

B.C. Hydro bus services may undergo a number of timetable and routing changes in Victoria this fall but service cuts are unlikely, Ald. Bill McElroy said today.

McElroy, the city's transportation committee chairman, said he's had discussions with Hydro about the changes but there has never been any talk about cutbacks.

He said his discussions with Hydro have all been aimed at clearing up the bottleneck of buses that occurs in the layover zones downtown.

Hydro is planning to reduce services on some of its runs in Vancouver this Novermber, but McElroy said it is vital that the level of service in Victoria be maintained.

Just back, Hemphill said the visit to Bell-Northern was an eye-opening introduction to the frontiers of telecommunications science.

Radford Sizes Up Bawlf

The man who held the recreation and conservation portfolio in the NDP government plans to challenge the Socred incumbent head-on in the next provincial election.

Jack Radford said today he will seek an NDP nomination in two-riding Victoria in a bid to oust Sam Bawlf.

The other seat is held by the NDP's Charles Barber.

Radford, who is a Vancouver Island representative for the Canadian Labor Congress, lives in Victoria and is a member of the city's NDP constituency association.

He said today a number of people have approached him about running against Bawlf.

"It could be interesting," Radford said.

He said he believes such a contest would be the first in B.C. history where a former minister took on the man who succeeded him in his portfolio.

UVic Rejects Language Bid

Students entering the University of Victoria will not need French 11 or a foreign language equivalent for admission, a UVic Senate meeting resolved Wednesday.

The language requirement, proposed by Dr. Michael Best, failed to gain enough support among faculty members when it came time to vote.

Best suggested last fall that UVic follow the example of the University of B.C. which by 1981 will require French or another Grade 11 second language for entrance.

Region Going to Fraser Over Portage Damage

The Capital Regional District board named a committee Wednesday to meet Highways Minister Alex Fraser in an effort to repair damage to Portage Inlet done by his department.

Members are board chairman Jim Campbell, directors Murray Glazier, Al Beasley and Shirley Dowell; executive director Dennis Young, regional planner Peter Hammer, regional engineer Norman Howard and Ernest Beland, a View Royal resident who is leading a protest against a tourist bureau and other facilities planned for the site.

Beasley said Wednesday, although they had been assured there would be no more dumping, fill was still being dumped last week and now stands seven to eight feet high.

The minister has been informed the highways department project contravenes View Royal's settlement plan for the scenic shoreline.

Campbell said he had a commitment in writing from Fraser that something would be done to alleviate the problem.

"I don't doubt the minister's integrity," he said.

UVic Man To Vienna

A University of Victoria law faculty professor is one of 10 Canadians invited to an international human rights congress in Vienna this month.

Professor James C. MacPherson, will attend the Sept. 12-16 congress as a UVic delegate.

Camsell's Long Tow To Start Saturday

The Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell, holed by Arctic ice Sunday morning, is expected to start a 5,000-mile tow to her home port of Victoria on Saturday.

The tug Canmar Supplier 3 arrived alongside the Camsell at Cambridge Bay at 2 a.m. today and will tow the Camsell 2,000 miles to Point Barrow. The tow then will be taken over by another commercial tug.

Department of Transport district manager Larry Slaght said the two gashes in the Camsell's port side — one seven feet and the other four feet — have been exposed and it is hoped temporary repairs will be completed by Thursday night.

Meanwhile, the remaining 21 crew members aboard Camsell are extremely uncomfortable, Slaght said. The temperature is below zero and, because the engines were damaged when the engine room was flooded, there is no heat.

Slaght said it is hoped to evacuate the crew members soon and put Camsell in a "dead ship condition" for the tow home.

Oh, Well, There's Always Next Year

Special to The Times

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Peterborough Red Oaks are Mann Cup Canadian lacrosse champions for 1978. Victoria Shamrocks will have to wait until next year.

Red Oaks proved much the best as they defeated the Shamrocks 14-6 in the seventh and deciding game of the national final here Wednesday.

The game was close for only the first 10 minutes. Then Victoria penalties took their toll. The Red Oaks scored three power-play goals and another goal into an unguarded net before the period was over to take a 4-1 lead and the Western Lacrosse Association champions never recovered.

Shamrocks never got any closer as they trailed 7-2 after the second period and were completely outplayed in the final 20 minutes.

It was quite a victory for the Red Oaks who had been described before this season started as "five old pros and some house players."

They were underdogs from the start of the series and seemingly had lost all chance when they trailed the Rocks 8-3 in the second period of Monday's sixth game of the series.

But they fought back to win that one, 13-11, and force the seventh game.

Red Oaks won the first 12-11, lost the next two by identical scores of 14-11, captured the fourth 15-7 and lost the fifth 11-7.

For Peterborough, it was their eighth national championship and first since 1973 when they won under the banner of Lakers.

Previously they had won four times from 1951-54 and in 1966, 1969 and '73.

For the Shamrocks it was their first try in the finals since they won the championship in 1957. Previously the Rocks had won the Mann Cup in 1955 while losing to Peterborough in 1953 and 1954.

"It was a culmination of hard work and a lot of guys who hated to lose," said Oaks coach Ben Floyd. "It was from the heart. We weren't supposed to win it but every player put out everything he had.

"In the game itself, we stayed out of the penalty box, we held them at centre and forced them to give up the ball."

Peterborough goaltender Tim Barrie won the Mike Kelly award as the most valuable player in the series.

"I was surprised to win the award as there at least five other players on this team that could have won it," said Barrie. "But I was still happy to receive it. The entire team played well and I had a super defence in front of me."

Barrie played for Nanaimo last year and was a member of Canada's national team which won the world field lacrosse championship in England this year.

Bob Wasson led the Red Oaks with four goals, Wednesday. Jimmy (J. J.) Johnson, Larry Floyd and Gerard Cowie scored two each and Tom Parnell, Peter Guerin, Paul Evans and team captain Jim Wasson added one apiece.

Jerry McKenna paced the Shamrocks with two goals while Norm Baker, Dan Green, Ivan Thompson and Ron McNeil scored one each.

Goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer played well for the Shamrocks who were outshot by the Red Oaks. Smeltzer was replaced in the final period by Scott Marshall.

Turnovers also hurt the Western champions who had 48 to Peterborough's 36.

Bitterly disappointed, coach Nirmal Dillon of the Rocks wasn't saying anything after Wednesday's game. But Chris Hall was quick to give the Red Oaks credit.

"We're not making any excuses," he said. "We lost to a better team. It was the Red Oaks game to win and they did it. We made too many mistakes.

"We had the chances but didn't do it. They deserve to be champions."

Paul Evans, brother of Nanaimo's Brian, topped all pointmakers with eight goals and 21 assists for 29 points. Brian led the Rocks with five goals and 19 assists for 24 points while MacNeil was the leading goal-scorer with 15. MacNeil (15-6—21) and Dan Green (10-11—21) tied for second on the Rocks.

Canucks Start Even Nobody Knows Who

There's one thing about the Vancouver Canucks this season that is at least different from years gone by — everybody is starting even.

The players don't know coach Harry Neale and coach Harry Neale doesn't know the players. Matter of fact, Neale is the first to admit that he doesn't know the league either.

"Maybe all that will work to my advantange," he said at a media luncheon in the Empress Hotel Wednesday.

HARRY NEALE
. . . starting even

Nobody really knows what to expect.

"After all things have started off well enough," said Neale. "We came by Air West and we got here."

Neale came to the Canucks this season from New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association to attempt to put together something that fell apart last season, and actually never was wired together very well.

And he brought a winning record with him which is also something new in the West. In six years in the WHA, his teams never missed the playoffs, four times at Minnesota with the Fighting Saints and the last two at New England.

But now, it's all new for everybody and before he got to meet many of the Canucks players personally, he suggested by letter that maybe he might be a tough task-masker.

He really doesn't know how tough either, because he's not sure what happened in other Canuck camps, but he did issue a pre-season warning that shouldn't have gone unheeded.

He wrote to 38 players, expected to attend camp in Courtenay, beginning Sunday, and suggested nicely that they please report in top off-season shape.

"There just won't be time after camp begins," he said. "Camp is only 22 days long; and again, because I don't know some of the players, I can't afford to wait and find out — I'm going to to have start making judgments the very first day."

As for exhibition games — and the Canucks meet Los Angeles Kings in a pre-season game here next Saturday — Neale's opinion is: "Exhibition games are for the players to show me how good they are."

Otherwise, Neale is going to have help from Dave Dunn, a former Canucks player, but now a coach. "It's a two-coach system," he explained and then he elaborated on one of Dunn's duties.

That will be to sit in the press box and keep what Neale called "abnormal stats", and these are for immediate study, between periods of the game in question and not primarily for the next day when the game is over.

"The time to rescue a game is before the next day," he said.

For instance what Neale would like to know is how many times a winger got the puck in his own end, how many times he got the puck out of his end and, how many times he didn't.

In other words it's not much use getting the puck if a player can't do what he is supposed to do with it; and let's find out soonest who is doing the job and who is guilty of not doing it. Now. Not tomorrow.

Also, Neale likes to use the word "takeout" in relation to another aspect of the game. Not that a Canuck has to run an opposition player out of the rink to qualify for a gold star, but rather he simply has to make certain that if an opposition player passes the puck he is taken out of the play.

"That man does not get back, into the play after he passes the puck," said Neale.

Fundamentals! Old hat! Maybe, but it is Neale's game. The same goes for faceoffs. "I have enough to do on the bench without keeping track of those things," said Neale; and if we have a spot where we can use the information then maybe we will have the edge.

The figure filbert will be Dunn, who will relay the vital stats to Neale between periods. "I like to think we can learn from each other," he said. "And if things aren't going too well, we'll knock heads together and see what we come up with.

Neale said he couldn't be sure what kind of a team the Canucks would have until he sees the players, but that he thought the team would play to best advantage against the opponent at the time — offensively if the situation demanded, and defensively if that appeared the best method.

But he did say that the most important part of the season would be against three clubs — Chicago, Colorado and St. Louis. "We have 24 games against those divisional opponents," he said, and those will be big games for us. They will all be four-pointers."

Neale also said he hoped to improve the Canucks home record which tumbled to only 13 victories last year.

As to players, Neale reiterated that as yet he didn't know them, but that the Vancouver Canuck scouts must have seen something good in the new ones — the Swedish players and the draft choices, while the holdovers would be fighting for their jobs along with everyone else and that every place on the team is wide open.

"To play well in junior, or to play well in Sweden is one thing," he added, "but to play well in the National Hockey League is another," he warned the newcomers.

Asked what was his prime objective, he answered simply: "To be back next year." Then he added: "If the team plays to its potential, I will be happy."

"I don't know if we'll have the best players," he said, "but I would just like to have the best team."

So far, he's still even.

There's a Lot of Frazier In Spinks, Says Aide

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "He's got to fight like he's the challenger," said George Benton, who has been helping Leon Spinks get ready to defend the World Boxing Association heavyweight title against Muhammad Ali on Friday night in the Superdome.

Benton, who helped trainer Sam Solomon prepare Spinks for his victory over Ali last Feb. 15 and who worked in former champion Joe Frazier's corner, is well aware of the Ali mystique.

"Anytime Ali throws one punch, he still might get credit for three," Benton said Wednesday.

But the mystique won't help Ali if Spinks is in good condition, said Benton.

"The key is condition. I've only been here two weeks. I can't tell you how hard he's been training before."

But the former middleweight contender said he has seen indications that Spinks was reaching peak condition, such as snapping at aides.

Benton thinks Ali is in shape, but "he's in 36-year-old shape" and if Spinks is physically ready "it wouldn't surprise me if he stopped him."

"I want him to gorilla him. I want him to beat on him. He wants to be left alone. He lost under pressure as a young man (to Frazier in 1971) and now he's 36."

"There's a lot of Frazier in this kid," he said. "He doesn't have Frazier's seasoning or his experience, but he does have the heart and the desire."

"He doesn't turn on the panic button. He turns on natural instinct. He fights for survival."

"Leon knows he can go 15 rounds," said Benton. "Before he wasn't sure, but now he is confident. Now it's a matter of reverse psychology. Ali's worried. He thought he could stay away for 10 rounds and Leon would run out of gas. Now Ali's worried about running out of gas."

It's all up to SpinksI—it's out of Ali's hands completely, said Benton.

"Leon Spinks can win, but Ali can't win," he said. "Leon Spinks can lose."

Both fighters concluded training Wednesday and will be officially weighed in today.

Weigh-ins will be held Friday for the other three title fights on the card—WBA light heavyweight champion Victor Galindez of Argentina vs. Mike Rossman of Turnersville, N.J.; World Boxing Council featherweight champion Danny (Little Red) Lopez of Alhambra, Calif., vs. Juan Malvarez of Argentina, and WBA bantamweight champion Jorge Lujan of Panama vs. Alberto Davila of Pomona, Calif.

If There's Any Tripping, Bassett Will Handle It

TORONTO (CP) — John Bassett says his decision on whether to continue operating Birmingham Bulls in the World Hockey Association depends on the league's position regarding use of underage junior players.

Bassett, majority owner of the Bulls, this summer agreed on contracts with six under-aged (under 20) players, contrary to the WHA's earlier stated position that it would not sign such players.

"I'm completely prepared to play hockey in the WHA this season," Bassett said Wednesday. "I paid the league half a million dollars in dues and I've kept my office staff. I'm ready.

"On the other hand, if I decide that way, I may not have a team in the WHA this season. It's my decision. I'm the only one who can pull the rug out from under me. Whether we play will depend on whether the under-aged kids can play.

"I'm not going to play unless I'm satisfied with the relationship vis-a-vis the juniors and the CAHA (Canada Amateur Hockey Association) as well as the relations with our league, which hasn't been the best."

Ben Hatskin, chairman of the WHA board, said the league has almost completed a new agreement with the CAHA. "We will play underaged juniors and we will pay the CAHA for them," said Hatskin.

The current agreement between the WHA and CAHA forbids the WHA from using under-age juniors. The current agreement, which expires Nov. 1, is backed by a $150,000 bond.

"Yes, there's a $150,000 bond and we may work out something with that, too," said Hatskin. "How much will we pay for the players? As I said, we haven't completed the deal, but we'll pay for them."

The under-20 players who agreed to contracts this year with Bassett are Bob Ramage and Pat Riggin of London Knights, Craig Hartsburgh of Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds, Rick Vaive of Sherbrooke Beavers, Keith Crowder of Peterborough Petes and Gaston Gingras of Brantford Alexanders, formerly Hamilton Fincups.

"We're holding the players' signing money in trust," said lawyer Allan Eagleson who represents the six. "We don't want to turn them proif they can't play. Because of the agreement between the WHA and CAHA, they can't sign until Nov. 1 anyway."

Hatskin admitted there is a possibility of the WHA buying Bassett out. "But it's up to Johnny. . "

Geordie Sparkles

Geordie Robertson proved he hadn't lost much momentum over the summer, leading Whites to an 11-7 victory over Blues in the Victoria Cougars' annual intra-squad game Wednesday at Pearkes Arena.

Robertson, who led the Western Hockey League team with 136 points last season, fired three goals and assisted on two others in the game before about 400 fans.

Mike Shields and Sid Giroux, two other holdovers, added two goals each. Singles were contributed by returning wingers Bob Jansch and George Fritz as well as rookies Barry Pederson of Nanaimo and Dale Kolada of Edmonton.

Rookie Rob Clavette of Victoria led Blues with three goals while the others were fired by rookies Torrie Robertson of Victoria, Brad Palmer of Lake Cowichan, Larry Oswald of Edmonton and holdover Gary Lupul.

Manager-coach Jack Shupe was expected to cut the squad to about 25 players today in preparation for a week-long exhibition series against New Westminster Bruins starting Friday at Lake Cowichan.

Yanks Back On Top As Expected

By Canadian Press

It took New York Yankees 144 games, but the World Series champions are back where they say they expected to be all along — first place.

Yankees took over the top spot in the American League East for the first time this season Wednesday night with a 7-3 victory over Detroit Tigers. Boston Red Sox, who had led the division since May 23 and once held a 14-game lead on New York, dropped one-half game back when they lost to Cleveland Indians, 2-1.

"It was just a matter of time before we took over first place," said rookie pitcher Jim Beattie, who allowed just three hits in 6 1-3 innings before yielding to relief ace Rich Gossage.

"I knew we'd be in first place," added Mickey Rivers who, along with Lou Piniella, tripled in a four-run fourth inning that keyed the Yankees win. "I just didn't know if we'd keep it."

"We're world champions," said Piniella. "You can't get exeited about moving into first place with 17 or 18 games to play. You get too excited and all of a sudden you fall on your rear."

It has been the Red Sox who have been falling of late, however. While New York has won 35 of 49 games since July 25 — when manager Bob Lemon took over — including a four-game sweep of the Red Sox in Boston last weekend, Don Zimmer's Sox have dropped 11 of their last 14.

"We just aren't scoring any runs," said Zimmer, who has decided to bench slumping first baseman George Scott. "I went as far with the man (Scott) as you can possibly go. It's not just one man, though. There aren't many moves I can make. That's one I can make."

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee Brewers closed to four games out with a 7-5 verdict over Baltimore Orioles and Kansas City Royals increased their West lead to 3½ games over California Angels with a 9-1 victory over Oakland A's while the Angels were beaten 6-4 by Texas Rangers.

Dan Briggs was the hero for Cleveland, making a sensational sliding catch with the bases loaded and two outs in the second inning, then tripling and scoring the winning run on a squeeze bunt by Tom Veryzer in the fifth.

"I had doubts all the way until I got it in my glove," said Briggs, who spent most of the season in the minors. "It was a do-or-die thing. But I guess the catch really started some momentum for us."

Milwaukee jumped to a 7-0 lead, then held off the Orioles. Sal Bando homered and drove in three runs for the Brewers and Robin Yount homered.

Dennis Leonard and Steve Mingori combined on a seven-hitter and Hal McRae drove in four runs, two with a homer. The game was delayed two hours by rain in the top of the seventh inning.

Pate Ninth

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Pate, who took home first-prize money of $35,000 in last weekend's Southern Open, has climbed into ninth place on the Professional Golfers Association tour money list with $167,999.

The victory qualified Pate for the World Series of Golf.

Tom Watson remained in the No. 1 spot on the money list with $303,429, followed by Andy Bean, $285,440; Jack Nicklaus, $249,772; Lee Travino, $215,295; Hubert Green, $183,906; Hale Irwin, $178,441; Bill Kratzert, $176,099; Gary Player, $170,366, Pate and Gil Morgan, $166,599.

RUGBY

Ezra Sakala wasn't laughing about the steady rain falling as he tried to work out Wednesday morning, but he was still chuckling a bit at the thought of "that white porter carrying my bags all that way at Toronto Airport."

"That's all right," his team captain Gordon Wadey told Sakala. "Just remember when we play tonight, don't kick. Run. That's your job — to run. Then the opponents will say: 'Look at that black bugger go!'"

Tough talk? Not really. Just a bit of friendly banter among the members of a somewhat unique rugby club from Africa.

The Lusaka Leopards were here to take on Vancouver Island Rugby Union second division club Saanich Agrarians on the last stop of a Canadian tour.

And you see Zambia, in direct contrast with neighboring Rhodesia and South Africa, has fully integrated sports teams.

So there was Ezra going at it out on the wing with black brother Morgan Chama at standoff-half while 37-year-old Wadey (who has played No.8 forward on the Zambian national team for the last 17 years) and the other palefaces made up most of the rest of the team.

While to us in Canada this is as it should be, in racially-fractured Africa where over the border literally only a grenade's throw away blacks and whites are battling in Rhodesia, I think it's something special.

Here were blacks and whites battling on the same side against a common foe in what some of us still insist is a friendly game!

Sure, tour manager Bill Rodgers told me. All sport is fully integrated in Zambia and the National Sports Council is doing a great job getting as many people involved as possible.

"Most of the blacks, of course, are in sports like boxing and soccer but we are getting more and more in rugby and golf," Rodgers said. "The national tennis champion last year was black and so is the current squash champ."

And, though rugby isn't something you'd probably associate with Zambia, it is growing in strength.

"We have a strong league with eight clubs in the first division, 11 in the second and 12 in the third division," said Rodgers, an Irish-born teacher under contract to the Zambian government. "Only trouble, though, is distance. We have to travel around 250 miles every other week to take on our nearest opponents!"

Still, after visits to nearby Kenya, Botswana and Mauritius, this is the Leopards' most ambitious jaunt yet.

They finished runner-up to an Ohio select side in a big tournament in Windsor, had one win and one loss against clubs elsewhere in Ontario and beat Douglas College in New Westminster, 9-6, before coming here.

Next stop: Dublin, where they'll play Irish club Clontarff. Then, after a few days' rest in London, it's off home to Zambia.

AGRARIANS TIE ZAMBIANS

Saanich Agrarians, a young side playing their first match of the season prior to opening play in the Vancouver Island Rugby Union's second division, battled Lusaka Leopards of Zambia to an 8-8 deadlock in an international exhibition match Wednesday at Macdonald Park.

Jerry Doney and Dave Lowden scored tries for Agrarians while vice-captain Dave Eastcroft and Ezra Sakala scored tries for Lusaka.

Agrarians, coached by Garry Bettridge, trained for three weeks prior to the match against the touring Zambian side.

Forest Tops Cup Champs

By Reuter

Liverpool, Defending European Cup soccer champion the last two seasons, was upset 2-0 Wednesday at Nottingham Forest, its English League First Division rival, in the first round of Cup competition.

It was Liverpool's 100th match in European soccer competitions, and one the club would just as soon forget. Gary Birtles, playing only his third senior game, put Forest ahead in the 26th minute and fullback Colin Barrett added a second goal after the interval.

Liverpool now faces a tough second-leg battle if it hopes to reach the final 16 and retain the coveted trophy.

AEK Athens had no goal scoring problems, crushing Portugal's F C Porto 6-1 in Greece.

Another team in top form was Spain's Real Madrid, six-time winner of the European Cup, which slammed Progres Niedercorn of Luxembourg 5-0.

Turkish champion Fenerbache stunned PSV Eindhoven of the Netherlands with a 2-1 victory in Istanbyl. Dutch World Cup star Erny Brandts scored for Eindhoven, which last season won the European Football Union (UEFA) Cup.

Belgium's Bruges, beaten by Liverpool in the European Cup final last May, struggled to beat Poland's Wisla Krakow 2-1 in their first-round, first-leg home match.

In the first round of the Cup Winners' Cup, Iceland's Reykjavic held favored Magdeburg of East Germany to a 1-1 home draw.

West German fans had plenty to cheer about in the UEFA Cup with Borussia Moenchengladback beating Austria's Sturm Graz 5-1 and MSV Duisberg hammering Lech Poznan of Poland 5-0.

A West German club was also involved in one of the night's most exciting matches — Fortuna Duesseldorf winning 4-3 away to Romania's Uni Craiova — in the Cup Winners' Cup.

Dimitroff To Pep Up Offense

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts confirmed Wednesday they have hired former Hamilton Tiger-Cats head coach Tom Dimitroff as offensive co-ordinator under new head coach Bud Riley for the remainder of the Canadian Football League season.

Dimitroff, also a former offensive coach with Ottawa Rough Riders, was hired as Hamilton head coach last year but was fired last month.

An Argos spokesman said the hiring of Dimitroff will allow head coach Riley to devote more time to the defence along with defensive line coach Del Wight.

The Argos fired defensive backfield coach Jim Rountree on Monday after he said he was unable to work with Riley. Rountree had been a close friend of Leo Cahill who was fired from the head coaching position following Sunday's 27-2 loss to Montreal.

Island Drivers In Position To Complete '200' Double

A couple of Island drivers are bidding this weekend to join Hershel McGriff as two-time winners of the Canada 200 in the seventh renewal of Western Speedway's premier stock car event of the year.

Roy Haslam of Victoria and George Stuart of Campbell River each have won the 200-lap event once, Haslam in 1975 and Stuart last year.

They're the only prior winners among the 30 entries expected at Friday's time trials and heat races and Saturday's consolation and main events.

Haslam has a good chance to repeat. He's the current leader on the International Driver's Challenge trail, which includes the 200, and has won three of 12 races so far in the series.

Stuart's chances of a double could hinge on the work he's doing this week on his '74 Nova. Reports are the car has taken a hard battering this summer, although Stuart logged his first victory of the series last month at Evergreen Speedway in Monore, Wash.

Other entries include guest driver Earl Ross of Ailsa Craig, Ont., Ron Eaton of Tacoma, Victoria's Rick O'Dell, Dan Crow of Boise, Ida., Roy Smith of Victoria, Marsh Mormyluk of St. Albert, Alta., Barry Powers of Regina, Mike Rollins of Tacoma, Reg Kennedy of Surrey, Lloyd Eby of Calgary and Norm Ellefson of Spokane.

Friday's time trials and heats start at 7 p.m. and Saturday's races begin at 8 p.m.

McCourt Goes to Court

DETROIT (AP) — The National Hockey League's compensation requirements for free agents are an illegal restraint of trade and should be scrapped, an economist said in U.S. district court Wednesday.

"Compensation and equalization provisions have the effect of contracting and in some cases virtually eliminating the market for free agents," James Koch, economics professor at the University of Rhode Island, testified.

Koch was a witness in the opening day of hearings to determine whether Detroit Red Wing Dale McCourt should be sent to Los Angeles Kings as payment for Detroit's signing of free agent goalie Rogie Vachon.

The hearing, before Judge Robert DeMascio, is on McCourt's request for a temporary injunction that would allow him to begin training camp with the Red Wings pending a final decision on his suit seeking to block the move permanently.

The 21-year-old Red Wings star filed the federal court suit against the Kings, the Wings and the NHL Players Assocation in an attempt to overturn an NHL arbitrator's decision sending him to the Kings for Vachon.

His five-count complaint accuses the three of violating anti-trust laws, restraint of trade, restraint of employment, two counts of breach of contract and abuse of an arbitration award.

That argument, which DeMascio identified as the crux of the suit, was forwarded by Koch.

"I regard it (compensation) as a restraint of trade. My conclusion tentatively is that it's unreasonable,"

DeMascio also heard from a well-known sports attorney, who argued that such compensation agreements effectively keep hockey clubs from bidding on players who may come at, too dear a cost.

"Vancouver said they were afraid of what they would lose in arbitration. The New York Rangers were extremely worried about what they would lose. The Rangers indicated to me privately that if there was no compensation, they would be most interested in signing Rogie," testified attorney Larry Rauch.

NHL TO INTRODUCE NEW FACEOFF RULE

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League rules committee has decided to introduce an experimental rule for the exhibition season that would eliminate dropping the puck for end-zone faceoffs.

Instead of dropping the puck, the linesman will place the puck on the ice between the two opposing players who must wait for the referee's whistle before moving to gain possession.

If one player moves too soon twice in the game, he would be banned from taking a faceoff for the remainder of the contest. The rule would apply only on faceoffs in the end zones, not at centre ice.

Montreal Games Engineer 'Understood Nothing'

MONTREAL (CP) — A picture of professional bungling in both the public and private sectors was drawn Wednesday in testimony at the Quebec government inquiry into the costs of the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

Witnesses testified that the Games organizing committee was not equipped to judge engineering and architectural matters, and was dominated by Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau.

In addition, an engineering consulting firm hired to draw up plans for the Olympic stadium had to drop the contract after it became apparent that it "understood nothing" about the job two years before the Games were to open.

The federal government, which was observing a hands-off policy toward the financing and staging of the Games, apparently suspected something was wrong, and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau wrote a polite letter to Drapeau in 1972 asking for information.

Andre Saumier, a civil servant who represented the federal government on the city's Olympic organizing committee, said he estimated in 1972 that the Games would run up a bill of about $500 million, at a time when Montreal was estimating a total cost of $124 million.

Apparently basing his figures on Saumier's estimate, Trudeau wrote to Drapeau—in a letter tabled at the inquiry Wednesday—saying that "our analysis . . . seems to indicate that the cost of the 1976 Olympic Games would be about $500 million and not $124 million as you have calculated.

"This analysis worries us all, my colleagues and myself, especially because we do not have at this moment any information on the financing of the operation."

Trudeau later asked the mayor, the province and the organizing committee for guarantees against a deficit. They complied on condition that federal legislation be passed to help out in fund-raising. In response, Ottawa created the Olympic stamp and coin programs and the Olympic lottery.

Saumier also testified that the Games organizing committee "had no particular competence in engineering or architectural matters" and had to rely on Drapeau's assurances that the construction of facilities was under control.

Drapeau sat on the organizing committee's board, and "was the dominant person," said Saumier, who has since moved from his federal civil service job to become Quebec's deputy minister of natural resources.

Earlier, Claude Phaneuf, former City of Montreal engineer responsible for planning of Olympic facilities, told the inquiry that a consulting engineering firm drawing up plans for the 70,000-seat stadium knew nothing about the job and proposed to use construction equipment that did not exist.

Phaneuf said he called representatives of the firm, Regis Trudeau et Associes, to his office in early 1974 to find out why they were behind in their work.

He asked them how they planned to hoist 40-ton cement blocks into place on the stadium's rim. They suggested large cranes on rails, he said.

"It was then that I saw they understood nothing." Phaneuf told them cranes did not exist to perform such a feat.

Previous testimony from another city engineer, Charles Boileau, has shown that Regis Trudeau et Associes, which was recommended for the job by Gerard Niding, chairman of the City of Montreal executive committee, eventually had to withdraw from the contract and leave its work unfinished.

Most of its plans for the stadium, and for a separate parking lot, had to be redone, but the firm received the full fee for its contracts and the city waived its right to legal recourse.

Regis Trudeau was among several firms raided earlier this month by Quebec provincial police, who said they were investigating alleged transactions between Olympic contractors and Gerard Niding. No charges have been laid.

Builders 'Must Change'

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Walker, director of the Fraser Institute of Vancouver, says builders will have to become more flexible and forget many procedures they have used during the last two decades to survive an expected slump in housing demand.

At a meeting Wednesday of the residential council of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, Walker said the building boom of the 1960s and early 1970s has left many builders unequipped to deal with a decline.

"Housing markets of the future will expand more slowly than in the past but they will also be quite different, and within that change of character lies an opportunity to adapt," he said.

Walker predicted that Alberta, British Columbia and the Maritime provinces probably will see a net inflow of population that will spur building demand during the next decade.

Ontario will receive only modest inflows and Quebec will continue to experience a net outflow.

"The coming slump in housing demand is not a temporary aberration of the sort we are used to. It reflects a basic change in our society and economy and it is one to which we all have to adapt."

In future, Walker predicted, governments will be less active in housing because of revenue constraints and a shift in political thought. He said this would worsen the slump.

Walker recommended the federal government remove capital gains tax to put real estate on an equal footing with other investments.

'Pam' Party A Killer

EDMONTON (CP) — Two city young people have died within the last year after trying to get "high" by sniffing a spray-on cooking oil sold under the trade name Pam.

Tracey Moore, 15, daughter of a city policeman and granddaughter of city public school trustee Herb Jamieson, died hours after sniffing the oil at a party last week.

Police say another teenager died about a year ago under similar circumstances, but they did not release details.

Jamieson said he finds it tragic that children are "playing with death." He said he plans to intensify a movement he started recently to have city schools reintroduce spiritual values into education.

The girl's father, Constable Rex Moore, was on patrol in the general area where the party was being held the night his daughter died.

Police said young people inhale the spray through plastic bags in hopes of becoming intoxicated more quickly than they can by sniffing model airplane glue. Model airplane glue also contains agents making it unpleasant to smell.

Once the oil blocks the oxygen exchange system of tiny blood vessels in the lungs, death is often difficult to avert, police said.

FUND CUTS BAD, TRA-LA, TRA-LA

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Chamber Choir had a political statement to deliver to the federal government so they did it the best way they knew how — in a song.

The 16-member choir took a break Tuesday from rehearsing a CBC television show and taped a singing telegram for broadcast on The National news later that day.

The song, with words written by choir director Charles Burtinshaw, was sung to the tune of the French folk song Aupres de Ma Blonde. It was designed to express the feeling of the arts community about the proposed federal budget cuts.

"We entertain the people to keep their spirits high," the choir sang in the first verse. "We cheer them to the maximum, so you can keep on taxin' them.

"Without any funding we'll go down, go down, go down."

The final lines of six-verse song were: "Think of the election, artists have been known to vote. Think of the election, keep the arts alive."

Judith James, choir general manager, said the lighthearted message was meant to represent the feelings of the arts community throughout Canada.

"Everybody in the arts is upset that the government has decided to cut funds," she said. "Basically, the telegram was designed to draw attention to a disheartening sign."

The Vancouver Chamber Choir is one of three professional choirs in Canada.

Investments Rising: Conference Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The outlook for business investment is improving as senior corporate executives grow more confident about economic prospects, says a Conference Board in Canada survey released today.

The board, a private economic forecasting agency with representation from the corporate, labor and government sectors, says important impediments to increased investment spending, such as weak demand, uncertainty over government policies and excess productive capacity, seem to be receding.

"As a result businessmen are beginning to increase their planned outlays on new plants and equipment," the report says.

A substantial improvement in corporate profits and sales during the first half of 1978 may have contributed to a sharp increase in investment in machinery and equipment in the second quarter.

The board says that following a sharp improvement in expectations in the first half of 1978, businessmen now believe the currrent pace of economic activity can be sustained over the immediate future. In the second, quarter, the economy grew at a real annual rate of 4.4 per cent, well above the first-quarter figure of 2.8 per cent.

The survey indicates that the proportion of businessmen who believe that now is a good time for new investments in plant and equipment rose has risen and is nearly double that of a year ago.

BROADBENT OPPOSES HANGING

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Ed Broadbent, federal NDP leader, said Wednesday he is not in favor of capital punishment because there is no evidence it is a deterrent.

"Since the abolishment of capital punishment, murders have gone down in this country," he said.

Speaking to a group of high school students, Broadbent also blamed Prime Minister Trudeau for the increase in unemployment, inflation and the rise of separtism in Quebec. He added that 10 years ago these three areas were seldom heard of in the country.

Broadbent returned to Ottawa following the one-day visit.

Cabinet Somersaulting: Clark

QUISPAMSIS, N.B. (CP) — Clashing statements by federal cabinet ministers on capital punishment and Senate reform are further evidence that the federal government is falling apart before our eyes, Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark said Wednesday.

He told a packed party meeting the government is switching positions on major issues in an attempt to cling to power in Ottawa.

"By their somersaulting there is clearly no ability to give moral leadership," Clark said.

He was referring to justice minister Otto Lang's allegedly conflicting statements on Senate reform in the last two weeks and on differences between Lang and Prime Minister Trudeau on a proposed referendum on capital punishment.

The Lang proposal was repudiated Wednesday by Trudeau.

This conflict shows the priciple of cabinet solidarity has been eroded as the Liberals try to hang onto power, Clark said.

"The country has been without a government in the last 10 months."

He ridiculed Lang's decision to refer government proposals on Senate reform to the Supreme Court of Canada. This acceptance of a Conservative proposal comes only a week after Lang defended the government's right to carry out Senate reform on its own, Clark said.

He also charged the federal government is planning to make the Queen an assistant governor-general in its constitutional proposals.

He repeated statements he had made earlier in Fredericton that the government is threatening Confederation by proposing to reduce equalization payments on its own.

The government's word can't be trusted, he said. The Conservatives plan to include the equalization principle in a constitution if they form a government after the next federal election.

Teacher Talks Stymied

EDMONTON (CP) — A marathon negotiating session between representatives of the Edmonton public school board and its striking teachers failed to reach a settlement Wdnesday night.

Representatives of both sides refused comment after the nine-hour meeting which ended at 11 p.m.

Board chairman Shirley Forbes said further talks were scheduled today.

Classes were cancelled for more than 67,000 students when the city's 3,900 public school teachers went on strike a week ago. The teachers want changes in working conditions such as fewer split grades.

The strike is the first by city teachers since April, 1921, when teachers went on strike over working conditions.

QUEBEC GPs ALONE ARE HAPPY: SURVEY

TORONTO (CP) — A survey of Canadian doctors shows that general practitioners in Quebec are the only happy doctors in the country, says an official of the College of Family Physicians of Canada.

Dr. Gary Gibson, president of the college's Ontario chapter, said in a speech to the Ontario Medical Association that a college survey showed that Quebec has the only "generally happy and satisfied family doctors in Canada."

Dr. Gibson said this is probably because Quebec pays its doctors for some services according to the amount of time spent with patients, while Ontario bases payments on procedures performed.

A college report released this week refers to family doctors as "dumbbells (working for) peanuts."

The report says that the average income of Ontario doctors fell to about $37,000 in 1976 from $41,000 in 1972.

The report said that rural doctors earn more than their urban counterparts and that doctors working in group practices have higher incomes than those working on their own.

A Day in the Life Of Two Soldiers

OTTAWA (CP) — In the military, rules are not made to be broken.

Consider the case of two retired career soldiers from the Halifax area who logged 26 and 27 years of service respectively, plus 364 days.

Their case was taken up by Progressive Conservative MP Michael Forrestall who wrote to Defence Minister Barney Danson.

Correspondence released by Forrestall shows the defence department ruled that because the men were released from the armed forces one day short of an additional year's service, they were not entitled to pension benefits for that period.

When the two became eligible for indexing provisions to supplement their military pensions — an arrangement that begins when age and years of service total 85 — they were told only full, complete years of service were counted.

Consequently, they had to wait another year before drawing benefits and received no credit for their "one day short" year.

Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East) took the plight of his two constituents to Danson after the pair had been rebuffed on appeals by lower levels in the bureaucracy.

But Danson rejected Forrestall's plea to make an exception to the rules on moral grounds or, alternatively, to allow the men to serve one day in the reserves to make up the critical one day.

"There is no legal way, except by obtaining a special Act of Parliament, whereby authority could be obtained to change the date of a person's release so as to extend the duration of service in the regular force by one day as suggested," the minister said.

Danson also said "there is no moral justification" for requesting a special act of Parliament since the situation is not unique. Many persons have made such submissions, he said.

"Although it would be nice to provide benefits to everyone by counting years and days, guidelines and regulations are necessary, and unfortunately not all personnel benefit by the decision," Danson acknowledged.

Defence department regulations specify that the effective date of release "shall be set by the approving authority" and that a service member may not claim a specific effective date of release as a right.

The department says that because the indexing provision did not come into effect until 1970, many of the requests for exemptions from those one or two days short of a full year originated from those who retired prior to that date.

Forrestall says Danson's refusal to allow the exemptions as a "cold, callous and narrow interpretation" of the regulations.

New Drug For Eye Problems

TORONTO (CP) — Eye and allergy specialists are seeking government approval of a new drug they say will treat hay fever and a serious eye disorder without the usual side-effects of cataracts and glaucoma.

Two Toronto eye specialists and two Hamilton allergists said Wednesday that the drug, sodium cromoglycate, reduces the need for cortisone, the drug normally used to treat vernal conjunctivitis and itchy eyes caused by hay fever.

Dr. John S. Crawford and Dr. Jerome J. Kazdan, of the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children, said vernal conjunctivitis, which runs in families, inflames eye membranes, causing bumps inside the eyelids.

Ocean Science Aid Urged

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — A federal-provincial task force recommends that investments in Canada's ocean industry be made income-tax deductible and that a Canadian Ocean Technology Resource Authority be set up to distribute $100 million in cost-shared research grants in the industry over five years.

The ocean industry consists of developers and manufacturers of specialized marine hardware, especially that used in offshore oil exploration, in fishing and by the military.

It does not include the shipbuilding or fishing industries.

The report by the Sector Task Force on the Canadian Ocean Industry also recommends that Canadian-content rules be incorporated into the proposed Oil and Gas Act and that taxation and duty regulations on offshore equipment be amended.

RCMP Tells of Stealing Dynamite for Terrorist

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP security service's "dirty tricks" squad stole dynamite from a construction site near Montreal in 1972 to help a terrorist informer, a royal commission was told Wednesday.

Constable Richard Daigle, who helped steal the dynamite, told the McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing that the informer's credibility would be enhanced among his fellow terrorists if he was able to show them a case of dynamite.

Daigle said his orders from S.Sgt. Donald McCleery, then head of the now-disbanded G4 dirty tricks squad, were that the dynamite should not be traceable and should not be obtained through the normal (legal) channels.

Daigle said he and his immediate superior, Cpl. Bernard Dubuc, spent two weeks in late May, 1972, driving around mines and construction sites in the Montreal area "to see if any sticks of dynamite would be left lying around carelessly."

He said he later learned safety laws required all explosives on such sites to be locked up.

He said he was not worried about the legality of the assignment because McCleery and Dubuc had told him to do it and there was some urgency about it.

Acting on a tip from another RCMP officer, Dubuc and Daigle finally found an isolated shed marked "EXPLOSIVES, DANGER" at a Richelieu Construction site somewhere in the Eastern Townships. Daigle was not certain of the location.

Dubuc broke the padlock on the door with a crowbar or tire iron and the men went inside. Groping around in the dark, they found a heavy cardboard box of dynamite and carried it to their car.

Later that day they transferred it to McCleery's summer cottage north of Montreal for undisclosed reasons.

Daigle followed Dubuc in a second police car so that no one would run into the back of the car where the dynamite was.

Mr. Justice McDonald asked Daigle whether he ever considered the operation unlawful. Daigle replied that the reasons for taking the dynamite seemed to justify the operation.

The judge asked where the defence of necessity stopped.

What if a superior told Daigle that "he needed a diamond ring from Birk's," the judge added.

There was "quite a difference" between the two, he told the judge. It would take more planning to get the ring.

Saanich Queries Servicing Costs

Saanich will review its policy of paying half the cost of installing services on private property.

The question arose at a public works committee Wednesday night when a developer asked council to pay half his estimated cost of $20,000 for covering 104 feet of Bowker Creek at Shelbourne and Stockton.

He wants to develop three lots there.

Aldermen wondered why they should pay half the cost to help a developer make a profit and they also questioned his estimate of $20,000 for the work.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said it was strange that a cost estimate would come out exactly to $20,000.

Aldermen asked for two independent estimates of the costs involved. The developer submitted the cost estimate and offered to do the work himself if council would pay half.

Ald. Geoff Vantreight said he would oppose council paying any part of the cost because the developer should have been aware when he bought the property the creek would eventually have to be covered.

Council should not use taxpayers' money to help free enterprisers make a profit, he said.

REPORT EXPECTED THIS FALL

The resignation of the chairman of the Regional District Review Committee shouldn't delay the committee's report, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday.

Phil Farmer of Kaleden told Curtis last Thursday he will be unable to complete his assignment due to an illness.

Curtis said the remaining members of the board will have added responsibilities in terms of reviewing drafts of the material already prepared.

But the minister said he still expects the completed report this fall.

The review committee was set up by Curtis to examine the structures and functions of the 28 regional districts in the province.

Vic Press Van Stolen

City police are investigating the theft of a Victoria Press van which was taken for a joy-ride early Tuesday morning.

A police spokesman said about $1,000 damage was done to the vehicle which was stolen from the company parking lot about 6 a.m.

The van was recovered in Saanich at a Lovat Avenue apartment complex two hours later. It had apparently struck a parked car and a tree. Several bundles of papers had been dumped on the streets.

The theft followed an incident in the Victoria Press mail room earlier in the morning when a youth got into a scuffle with some employees. Staff later discovered the cafeteria had been entered and some food cabinets rifled.

The youth had asked the driver of the van for a lift into town but was refused. The driver went into the building, leaving the truck running, and when he returned the truck was gone.

Saanich police questioned a youth but later released him.

Health Hazards Listed

B.C. has the worst motor vehicle accident record in Canada, Health Minister Bob McClelland told members of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce Wednesday at an Empress luncheon.

"We are killing 100 people a year and injuring about 25,000 more," McClelland said.

He also listed smoking as one of the most insidious habits man has imposed upon himself in terms of health hazards.

He said smoking plays a role in heart disease, lung cancer and emphysema.

The minister said heart attacks, strokes, lung cancer and motor vehicle accidents could all be reduced if people adopted a different healthier livestyle.

Accompanying the Chief will be his wife, Melita, and Arthur MacLeod Rogers of Toronto, the national president.

Plants Indians' Pharmacy West Coast Study Shows

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Wild plantain, similar to the pesky weed in city lawns, is collected as a cure for boils by Indians on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

And it probably works, according to two botanists who have completed a study on the traditional and modern uses of plants by Indians in the Clayoquot Sound area.

Margaret Norris of Victoria and Leslie Fenn of West Vancouver did their studies from Ucluelet and Tofino, adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park, through a Parks Canada grant to the Victoria Environmental Centre which employed the two young women.

Norris said some plants used for certain maladies are guarded family secrets which have been handed down from generation to generation. Others are common knowledge and form part of the folklore of the native peoples.

"For example, the leaves of lily of the valley are used for skin infections and the roots for eye irritations," she said. "Plantain for boils and wild strawberry leaves for diarrhea."

She said certain ferns are also used as medicine and some plants for making tonics.

Natural dyes are still being made from plants, but many craftswomen today are useing commercial products, she said.

Fenn said probably the most important use of plants on the coast is for technology, such as making baskets from various sedges and rushes, cedar bark for making hats and wood for masks.

"But no longer do you see bull kelp being stripped and plaited to make halibut fishing lines," she said. "Of course, there may still be someone living along the coast making such lines to keep the craft alive. Many Indian people are taking a renewed interest in their ancient skills."

The botanists saw no evidence of natural string being made from stinging nettle, but they were told how the product was made. The inner stem of the plant was dried and then beaten until the fibres came out. It was then twisted to make the string.

Norris said the native people never relied on plants for food. Their basic foods came from the sea. Vegetables supplemented their diet.

In the spring, a wide variety of plants were available for use as vegetables. The cow parsnip was one. The stem was peeled and eaten. The shoots of young plants, such as a species of horsetail also were eaten.

So were the sprouts of salmonberry and thimbleberry.

"I've eaten sprouts from these two shrubs," said Fenn. "They are delicious, tender and sweet."

"Today, of course, plants are seldom collected as food, except wild berries — salmonberries, huckleberries, thimbleberries, gooseberries, evergreen huckleberries, and many others," she said.

Norris and Fenn next year hope to do further studies on the native uses for plants.

Before The Judge

Raymond Severny, 3259 Eldon, was charged with fraudulently obtaining food and lodgings from the Executive House hotel and restaurant between Sept. 9 and 13 and with possession of stolen refund vouchers from Eaton's.

Crown counsel Don Laughton alleged that Severny went to the hotel dressed in an Anglican minister's garb, using the name Rev. Raymond Reskinoff, and amassed a $100-plus tab before telling staff he had no money.

Severny told the court he had been a heroin addict for 15 years but had been off narcotics for six years.

"There's nothing this court can do to me I haven't done to myself," Severny stated.

He said he was now an alcoholic and had fallen "off the wagon."

"I'm 36 and I'm sick and tired of being in jails," he said, pleading for his freedom, "I'm asking for a chance to help myself."

When Laughton questioned whether Severny's 76-year-old mother, who was proposed to stand surety bail for Severny, could hold any influence over a man who wore clerical garb, Severny replied, "My mother has more control over me than five policemen."

He said he got the priest's collar and other clothing from a "$39.50 mail order course."

"It's too bad you didn't earn that clerical garb you wore," Alder commented, releasing Severny on $500 surety bond.

In addition, Severny was also ordered to accept any alcoholic therapy prescribed in the interim.

He was remanded to next Wednesday for plea.

Alder ordered a pre-sentence report for 19-year-old Richard Byron Barker, who pleaded guilty to possession of $1,489 in stolen cash.

Barker was charged with theft Aug. 25 from Smith's Book and Card Shop, 736 Yates, possession of the stolen money, attempted theft, and wilful damage at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Laughton said Barker and a companion entered the book shop at about 2 p.m. and knocked over a book shelf.

The store owner, who was making up a deposit, went over to straighten things out when one of the youths grabbed the money and both ran out of the store. The woman chased them along Yates but lost them, Laughton said.

They were picked up later in the day in a taxi after Oak Bay police were called about an attempted break-in on Newport. Police found Barker in the back seat with a black, leather jacket beside him which contained two large bundles of money.

A check of the bundles indicated one bundle contained an American travellers' cheque made out to the book shop.

On the other two charges, Laughton said, Barker and some companions were asked to leave the Oak Bay Rec Centre at about 6:45 p.m., July 11, and Barker punched out a window valued at $34.72.

At about 11:50 the same night, Laughton continued, Barker was seen entering an auto on Belton Street, was chased and tackled, but escaped.

One of three men jointly charged with conspiracy to possess $33,120 in counterfeit U.S. $20 bills elected trial by judge and jury.

The election was made on behalf of 26-year-old Daniel Joseph Jacques Vallee, 2111 Spring, by defence lawyer Malcolm Macaulay.

All three were remanded until next Wednesday for election on behalf of the Normands and for fixing a preliminary hearing date for all three.

David Bruce Reeves, 17, of 975 Fairfield, was charged with trafficking in marijuana and possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking following an alleged transaction Wednesday morning with undercover narcotics agents.

Reeves was released on $1,000 surety bail and remanded to next Wednesday for election.

Twelve persons were fined a total of $4,900 on drinking-driving charges.

Two Found Guilty of Drug Conspiracy

Guilty verdicts were returned Wednesday following a six-day county court trial of two Victoria men charged with conspiracy to traffic in hashish.

Russell Tschritter, 33, and James William Buckner, 35, were remanded on bail to be sentenced by Judge M.L.T. Drake Oct. 13 at 9:30 a.m.

A jury consisting of nine women and three men also found Buckner guilty of an additional charge, of being in possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking.

The two accused were charged with conspiring between themselves and others unknown between July 15, 1975 and Jan. 6, 1976 to traffic in cannabis resin, evidence of which was presented by the Crown in the form of tape-recorded wiretaps of hundreds of telephone conversations.

The second count, against Buckner alone, charged that he had a kilo of the narcotic cannabis resin in a truck he was bringing to Victoria from Vancouver on Nov. 19, 1975.

Neither accused chose to call evidence in their defence and Buckner, who said the evidence speaks for itself, elected not to address the jury. Counsel Douglas Christie, on behalf of Tschritter, had told the jury that opinion evidence of the police, based on tapes not proven to his satisfaction, was no better than his or their opinions.

Drake told the jury they must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt before deciding guilt, and that the integrity of the tapes must be determined by them as part of the process. Jurors must be satisfied the tapes were genuine, not manufactured or tampered with, and that the voices on them were those of the persons alleged.

He said the tapes in which alleged agreement between the parties took place could be narrowed to November, 1975. The jury had access to the tapes and a tape recorder during deliberations.

The jury retired for one hour, 40 minutes before lunch and just under two hours after lunch to return their first verdict at 3:27. Members of the jury were instructed to deal individually with the two phases of the second charge faced by Buckner.

After finding both accused guilty of the conspiracy charge and Buckner in possession of a narcotic as charged in the second count, jurors again retired for about 45 minutes to find Buckner guilty of possession for the purpose of trafficking.

Christie asked for continuation of Tschritter's $2,000 surety bail pending a pre-sentence report, to which Drake agreed. Buckner's bail was raised from $2,000 to $5,000 surety after the Crown opposed his release pending sentence, on grounds of previous convictions including a $100 fine in August for being in possession of a narcotic.

15 Months For Drug Trafficking

A man who disclaimed ownership of 17 pounds 12¾ ounces of marijuana but pleaded guilty to possession for the purpose of trafficking was sentenced in county court Wednesday to 15 months in jail.

John Christopher Howard, 28, entered his plea Aug. 8 before Judge E.J.C. Stewart, who adjourned the case until Monday for a pre-sentence report.

After reading the report the judge said, "Those who become involved in the distribution of a substantial amount of a narcotic must expect a term of imprisonment."

But he said in the absence of evidence of further involvement, besides possession, he could impose a shorter term.

Counsel Bob Johnston said the accused had gone to his home at Sooke the previous day to find the bundle of marijuana on his kitchen table. He didn't want the drug, had no interest in it, financial or otherwise, and wanted to put it in his car and return it to its owner.

But in the course of getting the car out of a ditch, the suspicions of a tow truck driver — who also happened to be an auxiliary constable — were aroused and the matter was reported to police, Johnston said.

Counsel said Howard would not testify as to the sequence of events because he feared physical violence as a result of having to name other persons involved.

Derek Finall, for the Crown, said there was nothing in the police investigation to support the explanation offered.

Microwave Oven Not Harmful

By DR. JEAN MAYER and
DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. Does the food cooked in microwave ovens retain any radiation that might be harmful? Also, are there any nutritional differences between foods cooked in these ovens and foods prepared by conventional methods?

A. Foods cooked in microwave ovens do not pick up any radiation or become radioactive. The real differences between cooking by conventional methods and cooking with nicrowaves are the sources of heat and the way the heat penetrates the food.

Microwaves are simply a type of electromagnetic energy that makes the water molecules in food move. This causes a rapid rise in temperature, and food cooks quickly. Most studies comparing the nutritive value of food cooked in conventional and microwave ovens have failed to demonstrate any significant differences between the two methods.

Q. Recently my daughter and her apartment-mates invited me for a vegetarian dinner. One of the dishes contained something they call tofu. They said it was made from soybeans. Can you tell me more about it?

A. Tofu — also called bean curd — is made from dried soybeans, water and a solidifying agent. First the beans are soaked, then they are ground to a milky white, cottage cheese-like curd and cooked under pressure to extract the "whey." Next, a solidifier such as nigari (seawater from which the salt has been removed), lemon juice, vinegar or calcium sulfate is added, and the mixture thickens. Finally, the thickened curd is layered into special colanders, pressed and cut into cakes.

From a nutritional point of view, an 8-ounce cake, which provides about 150 calories, contains roughly the same amount of protein as 2¼ ounces of lean meat. It also carries some B vitamins and some iron.

Tofu is sometimes cut into cubes, dunked in soy sauce and eaten "as is." But for the body to use the protein tofu contains most efficiently, it should be combined with other protein foods in soups or mixed dishes or at least eaten as part of a meal that contains other protein sources.

You can usually find tofu in an Oriental grocery in a large tin covered with water. At home it can be stored in water in the refrigerator for about 10 days. To keep it tasting fresh, however, the water should be changed daily.

Q. In discussing the requirements for nutrients, you often refer to the "RDA," or "Recommended Dietary Allowances." Is this the same as the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances I see listed on the nutrition information panel on food items?

A. No, although they are somewhat akin. The Recommended Dietary Allowances were first established in 1943 by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council and have been revised periodically ever since. The present edition defines the estimated need for 10 vitamins and six minerals, as well as for protein and calories, according to age and sex, with special categories for pregnant and lactating women. The RDA are set to include the amount of a particular nutrient needed to prevent a deficiency plus a generous margin to allow for variation in individual needs. In all, there are 17 sets of requirements, and while this specific breakdown on foods has many important uses, it would certainly never all fit on the label of a can of tuna fish! Moreover, the consumer really doesn't need such detailed information.

Thus a more compact set of standards — the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances — was developed by the Food and Drug Administration for use in the nutrition labeling and dietary supplement program. The information is abbreviated and presented for four age groups: (1) infants up to 12 months old, (2) children 4 years old or younger, (3) pregnant and lactating women, and (4), the one used most commonly, adults and children over 4 years of age. In general, the upper requirements in the RDA tables are used to provide a little extra for everyone, except for pregnant and lactating women.

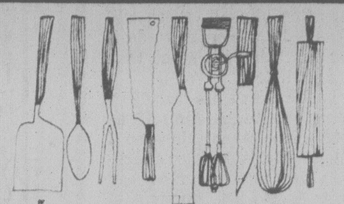
Bake in 400°F oven 30 to 40 minutes, turning once, until tender and browned. Prepare gravy following directions on envelope. Stir in sour cream and sherry; heat just to simmering. Serve over chicken breasts. Four servings.

Vegetables Don't Head South

FOOD & nutrition



Vegetables don't go south for the winter. Those that are harvested late can be stored under cool, moist conditions and retain their freshness throughout the winter months. They include the root crops — beets, carrots, parsnips and rutabagas as well as cabbage, celery and potatoes. And so comes the name "root cellar".

To ensure that these vegetables don't dry up and shrivel during the winter months, be sure to place them in perforated polyethylene bags. Carrots will keep for four to five months if properly wrapped and stored at a temperature of O.O°C or 32°F; rutabagas, six months; parsnips, two to four months; and beets, one to three months.

Cabbages should be trimmed before being put into the perforated bags to help retain moisture and color. They're best stored in the dark and will keep fresh for three to four months.

Celery can be stored in the cellar if you lift the plants with the roots intact and set them close together in boxes of moist soil. Keep the soil moist but don't let water get on the tops because this speeds up decay.

Potatoes have a tendency to get sweeter if stored at temperatures lower than 4.4°C or 40°F. They're much better if you store them at a temperature of 4.4-10°C or 40-50°F. If you must store them in cooler temperatures, remove some from storage from time to time and recondition them at room temperature for one to two weeks before use.

Food consultants at Agriculture Canada suggest you keep checking on the vegetables and remove any decaying produce. If these precautions are not taken, serious losses from decay are likely to result.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 29 years hates love-making. She often says she finds the whole idea "revolting". In fact, she doesn't even want to be kissed.

The odd thing is that when she is with any of her three brothers, it's kissy, kissy, kissy, all the time. Good morning kisses, good night kisses, and hello and goodbye kisses. (And she kisses them in between times, too.)

Although I have never strayed from the straight and narrow, I know that women find me attractive. I mention this because you usually take the wife's side in any marital squabble.

What do you make of this situation? I am not jealous. I am merely...

MYSTIFIED

DEAR MYSTIFIED: Your wife probably fears that your kisses are just the preliminary to the "revolting" main event — an unlikely event with her brothers.

She needs counseling on the role of sex in a "succexful" (sic) marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Apparently you never dated someone who bestowed "ishy kisses", like the girl who wrote you about a poor kisser she dated.

You said, "Kiss him the way you'd like to be kissed. Then hang on to your hat!

Not always so! I am happily married, but when I was dating I enjoyed kissing so much I always looked forward to the end of the evening. Some guys can kiss, and some can't. Some can eventually learn and some absolutely never learn.

I know, because I'm married to a great guy who just can't seem to get the hang of it. And I've been kissing him in the way I'd like to be kissed for ten years.

I'm not complaining, and I wouldn't trade my husband for the world, but when I think of some of those super kissers I dated, I emit a secret sigh. Sign me...

HOT LIPS

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the 17-year-old who doesn't clean his room: You were right — up to a point. Yes, close his door, but don't go in and rake it once a week. It's his room, his mess and his responsibility.

If Mom always cleans up his messes, he'll grow up to be one more male who is convinced that if he doesn't clean up after himself, there will always be a woman to do it for him. First it's Mom, then it's his wife.

If he becomes messy enough to disgust himself, he will clean it up. How do I know? My two older daughters are now married and their homes are immaculate and neat. My youngest daughter, 17, is still at home and still a slob — just as her two older sisters used to be.

Pierre's Trout 'Ambrosia-Sweet'

Up here, a two-and-one-half hour drive from Manhattan, there is a territory known as the Catskills. To some of the citizens and visitors hereabouts, it is also known as a transplant of the French Pyrenees, which was once home for many of those who have settled here. And American citizens of French background, who visit here by the score, agree that this area reminds them of the French mountain range.

Those who come here to ski or climb on Hunter Mountain, who hunt in the hills and fish in the Eposus and other rivers and streams, are varied in their occupations. There are waiters and chefs and restaurant owners. There are vintners and perfumers and construction men and hairdressers, and they have been coming here for nearly a quarter of a century.

I came to visit for one reason expressly. I had heard of a legendary fisherman, a frenchman and former restaurant owner, who still dabbles to an uncommon and fascinating degree in food. Besides, it was trout season and the thought of a freshly-caught rainbow or speckled brown trout sizzling in a skillet on a spring morning whetted the appetite.

The man's name is Pierre Larre, 57 years old, slightly built, who was born in New York but was taken to France by his parents, where he was raised in a small town halfway between Pau and Lourdes in the Pyrenees.

For many years Pierre was a partner with his four brothers in Larre's Restaurant in Manhattan, one of those dining establishments almost invariably detailed in any list of relatively inexpensive dining establishments in new York. He retired to his mountain home four years ago, when management of the business fell to his nephew, Jean Larre, 39, and his son, Jean, 25.

We gathered together on a frosty morning over crusty rolls and coffee and tea in the Inn of the Four Seasons.

"It's a bad day for trout," he said, gloomily, he who is celebrated among his friends as a man who fishes every day permitted by law and never returns home without his legal limit.

"Last night there was a full moon," he told us. "The fish have been up all night eating. They won't be hungry. Besides, the water's too cold. The fish won't be moving." He looked honestly worried. "I promised you fish for lunch. Perhaps I should get some neighbors to help me just in case." At this point we were joined by his son, Jean, who had the day off.

A few moments later, Pierre and his son descended with poles down the banks of a small, rock-ridden stream, the water gushing over rapids. We remarked on the turbulence.

Seconds later a trout caught his hook and that was one for lunch. Another. And another. These fish, obviously, hadn't been up all night eating their breakfast by the light of the moon.

Back into automobiles, down more river banks and by noon the bags were full to the limit.

Later, we arrived with a bag of charcoal and a flat iron adjustable fry-pan at a flat, stony terrain on the banks of a stream lined with pussywillows.

Pierre unloaded his oil and flour, salt, pepper, butter, partly cooked potatoes and an onion and proceeded to build a fire. First, a group of flat stones were assembled overlapping and in circular fashion to make a ringed fire pit, three feet wide. Into the centre went dried sprigs, pieces of driftwood and charcoal, and moments later the fire was ablaze.

Pierre went about his business of heating oil in the flat grill, dusting the fish with salt, pepper and flour and cooking it until deliciously brown. As the fish cooked, the potatoes were sliced onto the grill along with thin slices of onion. A touch of salt and pepper was added.

The trout cooked bank-side by Pierre Larre were pure ambrosia-sweet, tender, crisp skin and moist, juicy inner texture. And marvelously complemented by the potatoes and onions.

TRUITES PIERRE LARRE
(Pan-fried Trout)

4 trout, 8 to 10 ounces each, cleaned but with head and tail on Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Flour for dredging
⅓ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
3 partly cooked, peeled potatoes, cut into quarter-inch slices, about three cups
1 small onion, peeled and sliced
Lemon wedges.

1. Sprinkle the trout on all sides with salt and pepper. Dredge lightly in flour.

2. Meanwhile, heat the oil in a large iron skillet over a hot charcoal fire. Or heat it on the stove.

3. When the oil is hot and almost smoking, add the fish and cook until crisp and golden brown on one side. Turn and cook until crisp and golden on the other side. Continue cooking until the fish is cooked through. Cooking time will depend on the size of the fish.

4. As the fish cook, push them to one side and add the potatoes and onions. Cook, turning the potatoes and onion slices, until browned and golden on both sides. Remove the fish and serve with lemon wedges. Serve with the potatoes and onions.

New York Times

Citrus Swirl Cake

1 cup butter
1¾ cup sugar
3 egg yolks
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup buttermilk
½ teaspoon lemon flavoring
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
Food coloring
6 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Cream butter and sugar together until light and fluffy. This is important to success in baking; all graininess of sugar must be gone. Beat in egg yolks,. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda and salt and add alternately with buttermilk. Now comes the swirl part.

Divide batter in 2 parts. To first part, add lemon flavoring and grated rind. To second part, add grated orange rind and a few drops of orange or yellow food coloring. You need good contrast in color between the two batters. Have a greased and floured tube or bundt pan ready.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Lastly, divide the stiffly beaten egg whites, folding half into each batter. Spoon batters in layers in pan to achieve a marbled affect. Bake for one hour.

GLAUCOMA DOESN'T LEAD TO CATARACTS

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Both my mother and father have had surgery for cataracts of the eyes. Now, at the age of 42, it has been found that I have glaucoma. My concern is that this will eventually lead to cataracts. — Mr. A.H.B.

Dear Mr. B.:

I am certain that the doctor who was astute enough to recognize the presence of glaucoma must have assured you that there is no relationship between that and the formation of cataracts.

It's too bad that so many people live in the shadow of fear when a forthright discussion with their doctor can so readily eliminate it.

Glaucoma is a condition in which the fluid within the eyeball increases. This complex chemical fluid is constantly being manufactured by special cells. The fluid then circulates inside the eyes and empties through a tiny tube.

Normally, the pressure inside the eyeball remains at a constant level. When there is an unusual increase in the production of the fluid or when there is some interference with the withdrawal of it, the pressure begins to build up. This is early glaucoma.

When unrecognized and untreated, the fluid pressure within the eyeball compresses the arteries and the veins and it can lead to impaired vision. Glaucoma is almost always controllable. In most cases, drugs are effective. In some special instances, a simple and safe operation is necessary.

Early detection is the answer. Consequently, every eye examination must include the tonometer test for glaucoma.

The presence of glaucoma does not mean that cataracts will form. A cataract is a clouding of the lens and is in no way related to glaucoma. There is no reason why you should live in a state of unnecessary anxiety about a condition that may never occur.

Can vitamin pills help to increase weight? I'm 14 years old and would like to be a little heavier than I am now. — Andrew K.

Dear Andrew:

Vitamins do not contain significant calories and cannot in themselves be used to gain weight. Only a nourishing diet, high in calories, will help do this.

In most instances, a good diet free from tempting junk foods will not require a vitamin supplement.

Are you skipping breakfast in your hurry to get to school? If you are, you must remember that you are depriving yourself of many additional calories that would add to your weight. Also, you should concentrate on those foods that are nutritious as well as high in calories.

Good luck with your campaign to gain, Andrew. Many people would be happy to have your problem!

Proteins Not Understood

TOO MUCH, NOT GOOD

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

Protein is widely regarded as the most important nutrient, and the average person — not wanting to stint on a good thing — tends to consume far more protein than he really needs. Unfortunately, while packing in protein, most people consume too much fat and possibly too many calories, which are the "baggage" in most high-protein food. Thus, instead of being good to their bodies, they may actually do themselves a disservice.

At the same time, many don't realize that the vegetables they commonly think of as starch (that is, laden with carbohydrates) can actually be good sources of protein, minus the artery-clogging fats and cholesterol that are in most animal protein foods.

Others who spurn animal proteins — whether for religious, moral or health reasons — and instead rely on vegetable protein may not consume adequate amounts of usable protein because they don't understand the precise demands of the body's protein requirements.

The myths and misconceptions about protein date back at least 150 years when a Dutch chemist coined the name protein from a Greek word meaning "to take first place."

Perhaps the chemist was acknowledging the primacy of protein's main functions — to maintain body tissues and support growth — and the fact that the body can only make protein from proteins supplied in the diet, whereas fats and carbohydrates can be derived from one another and from proteins as well.

But thinking of protein as the "first place" nutrient overlooks the nutritional value of fats and carbohydrates and the fact that these foodstuffs, rather than protein, must provide the bulk of calories in a healthy diet. In fact, if the diet does not contain adequate calories from carbohydrates and fats, the body is forced to use protein for energy instead of for building or repairing body tissues.

The main malnutrition problem in developing countries is actually a problem of inadequate calories rather than a protein shortage. If more carbohydrates or fat calories were available, in most cases the diets in these countries would contain adequate protein to support normal growth and development.

Proteins are made up of chains of building blocks called amino acids, molecules that contain nitrogen. Sometimes as many as 200 amino acid molecules are strung together to make one protein. There are about 20 different amino acids in nature, and the human body is able to manufacture all but eight and possibly nine of them from carbohydrates and nitrogen, usually derived from dietary proteins. These eight or nine are called "essential" amino acids; they all must be supplied as such in the diet for the body to be able to manufacture the hundreds of different proteins it needs.

All protein originally comes from plants, which unlike animals can incorporate inorganic nitrogen from the air and soil into organic compounds (amino acids) that can be used by man and other animals. But there are important differences between animal and plant (vegetable) proteins in terms of their amino acid constitutents. Animal protein contains all the amino acids essential to man, whereas different vegetable proteins may be deficient in one or another essential amino acid.

The protein you eat is broken down, or digested, into its constituent amino acids, which are absorbed into the blood stream and distributed to cells, where they can be taken apart and reassembled into new proteins according to the needs of the cells.

Every cell in your body contains some protein. Protein comprises 50 per cent of the body's dry weight. Muscle, bone, cartilage, skin, blood, lymph all contain protein. All enzymes and many hormones are proteins. Only bile and urine normally lack protein.

Protein in muscle allows it to contract and hold water. In hair, skin and nails, the protein is hand and insoluble, giving a body a protective coating. Protein elasticizes blood vessel walls, allowing them to expand and contract to maintain normal blood pressure. And protein provides the rigid framework for the minerals of bones and teeth.

Without protein, new tissues needed for growth cannot be formed and old worn-out tissues cannot be replaced. Proteins are also involved in regulating the body's water and acid-base balance and stimulating the production of anti-bodies.

Factors that affect the body's ability to use protein in the diet for thes purposes include the following:

— Whether the diet contains sufficient calories to fulfill the body's energy needs. If calories are inadequate the body will use protein in the diet for fuel rather than for tissue building.

— The frequency with which protein is supplied in the diet. The body doesn't store protein the way it stores extra fat in fat cells or extra carbohydrates in the liver and muscles. Protein must be consumed daily, preferably at each meal. In fact, the body uses protein most efficiently if it is consumed in frequent small meals — for example, six a day — than if eaten at three big meals.

— Whether the protein consumed is balanced to supply adequate amounts of essential amino acids plus a healthy supply of the nonessential ones. Because protein is not stored, all the amino acids needed to make new protein must be supplied at the same meal.

If the protein you eat comes from animals (for example, meat, milk products, fish, poultry or eggs), it will be balanced enough to assure efficient utilization.

In general, the amount of protein your body needs is mainly determined by your age and size. Per pound of body weight, the need is greatest during the first six months of life and, except for women who are pregnant or breast feeding and need extra protein, the protein requirement declines slowly with age.

The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council has prepared a list of Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs) for protein, which represents the minimum protein required per day at different ages plus a substantial safety factor of about 45 per cent. This would meet the needs of nearly all healthy persons.

However, the average North American eats twice the recommended amounts, with the extra protein simply being a source of calories (four calories a gram), not protein for the body. This is why you can get fat eating excess protein. It is generally recommended that a third of the needed protein should come from animal sources and the rest from vegetables, but in this country 60 to 80 per cent of the protein eaten is animal protein.

caloric intake, since gram for gram, fat has more than twice the calories that carbohydrates have.

Do you know why there is a difference of six months between the seasons in the northern and those in the southern hemisphere?

A diagram and the accompanying text in the four-page leaflet The Seasons explains the earth's annual path around the sun. It shows that the axis about which the earth rotates daily is tilted. While the earth moves along its orbit the axis maintains the same direction in space but continuously changes its direction with respect to the sun. It is this change in direction of the earth's axis relative to the sun which causes the seasons.

During that part of the year when the northern hemisphere is turned towards the sun and we have our warmer seasons, the southern hemisphere is turned away from the sun and experiences the colder seasons. This is why the seasons are reversed in the two hemispheres.

We all know that the highest summer temperature does not coincide with the time when we have the longest exposure to the sun. This is due to the accumulation of heat in the atmosphere and the oceans. For some weeks following the longest day of the year, the earth receives more heat from the sun than it radiates into space. Not until the rate of heat it receives equals the rate of heat lost is the maximum temperature reached.

IS BLANCHING NECESSARY?

Nutrition Buyline

QUESTION:

ANSWER:

Yes, vegetables must be blanched before freezing. Vegetables contain chemical substances called enzymes, which help the vegetable to ripen. These enzymes must be inactivated by blanching or they will continue to act and will cause undesirable changes in the flavour, colour, and texture of the vegetables when frozen. It is best to work with a small amount of vegetables at one time. Use only the amount of vegetables you would require for your family and perhaps guests for one meal. Blanch for the time recommended, drain, and quickly chill in a collander covered with ice cubes. Chill the vegetables for the same length of time that they were blanched, then drain, and turn out onto paper towels or clean cloth towels to remove any moisture. Place in plastic bags, or moisture-vapor proof bags, remove any air, seal well, label and promptly store in your freezer.

QUESTION:

ANSWER:

Although the iron content of spinach is high it has been found that it is in a form that is not readily available to the digestive tract. You can increase the availability of iron by including a food high in vitamin C (e.g. tomatoes) at the same meal. Iron from animal sources such as red meats and eggs is more readily utilized by the body than iron from plant sources.

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	If you come down with a cold or headache today give it attention. Avoid overeating this evening.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	You'll be able to overcome work problems easily. Friends will enjoy your company and conversation.

We all have chores that need doing periodically. Jobs like checking the car, oiling a water pump, cleaning out the fridge. Why not use Bio-dex as a handy reminder. When your physical curve reaches a 5-point peak tackle those often irksome tasks. Not only will you remember more easily, but you work better and safely when your Bio-dex is high.

Arson, Profitable Business

WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to set your house on fire? You can turn on an electric radio, wrap it tightly in a blanket and then wait for the heat to build up enough for the blanket to burn.

Or, you might try this one:

Open your telephone and insert a kitchen match next to the bell striker so it will vibrate when the phone rings. Then put a small piece of sandpaper close by. That way, when the bell rings, the match rubs the surface of the sandpaper and ignites.

A Senate permanent investigations subcommittee got these and other lessons Wednesday during hearings on arson-for-profit.

Senator Charles Percy (Rep. Ill.), heading the investigation, has cited estimates that arson for profit costs insurance companies $2 billion a year, resulting in higher premiums for honest property owners.

The subcommittee heard testimony last month from several admitted professional arsonists, including one who said his skill enabled him to buy a new car every year.

Leonard Mikeska, chief arson investigator for the Houston fire department, testified Wednesday how hard it was to catch an arsonist.

"There seems to be no end to the imagination of arsonists in Houston," said Mikeska. "In my experience, if a torch (arsonist) wants to bring down a building, even against some of the best security, he can succeed."

Among the witnesses Wednesday were two women whose residences had been burned.

One woman, Hedy Byrd of Manhattan, N.Y., said she had been burned out of two apartments in the last two years. Although there was no direct evidence of arson in either case, she said she suspected the second fire, which occurred last May, was deliberately set.

The 24-year-old mother of four described how she helped save her children in the second fire last May. But two of her children still have nightmares as a result of the fire.

She had no insurance and has no money to buy her family new clothes or furniture, she testified.

The second woman, Elsa Peterson of Minneapolis, said the fire that destroyed her residence began in a nearby building housing a dentist's office.

Climbers Found

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — The bodies of two missing climbers have been found at the 13,300-foot level of Mount Rainier, a park spokesman said Wednesday.

The bodies were found after a search and rescue helicopter spotted ice axes in the snow on Tuesday, and searched the area.

Italy's No. 1 Terrorist Nabbed

MILAN (AP) — Police say the arrest of Corrado Alunni, Italy's most wanted terrorist and reputed leader of the Red Brigades, is a major breakthrough in the hunt for the killers of former premier Aldo Moro.

Alunni, 30, was arrested Wednesday evening in a suburb of Milan. Police said he was caught in an apartment that contained a cache of firearms, ammunition and explosives, and important documents.

Informed sources said the documents contained detailed plans for more terrorist attacks by the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared organization of urban guerrillas. The papers also furnished leads that spurred the search for other wanted terrorists, the sources indicated.

Both Alunni and his captors were surprised. The police had staked out the apartment for several days but were unaware of the identity of the man inside.

Alunni's photograph was circulated after the Red Brigades kidnapped Moro, the president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, in Rome on March 16 and killed his five bodyguards. Alunni was one of 11 persons charged with taking part in the abduction. But since then he had shaved off his mustache, let his hair grow and replaced his glasses with contact lenses.

Moro's bullet-riddled body was found May 9 in a car parked in downtown Rome. With Alunni's arrest, 11 of the 17 persons charged in the case are still at large. Five others were arrested in Rome after police found a printing shop where the terrorists prepared the communiques and letters issued throughout Moro's captivity.

Police say Alunni is the head of the most radical and determined faction within the Red Brigades. They believe he became the leader of the whole organization after the arrest in 1976 of Renato Curcio, the founder of the movement who is serving a 15-year prison term.

'Ax Man' Charge Made

NEW YORK (AP) — A 23-year-old man has been arrested and charged with the axe murders of two derelicts found in a vacant lot in Brooklyn with a note nearby that said: "The Ax Man. 2 down and 9 to go."

An officer of the 11th homicide squad said Wednesday night Eddie Diaz, who lived not far from where the bodies were found, has been charged with murder and carrying a restricted weapon.

The victims were Frank Anderson, 56, a retired Norwegian seaman, and Daniel Meehan, 57, who was reported to have been a U.S. Marine decorated for his Second World War exploits.

After the killings a neighborhood child said of Anderson and Meehan:

"We like all the bums, but we loved these two. They had their own world in the park. Why take it away from them?"

Police said the motive for the slayings was not known.

Third World Countries Receive Healthy Report

By Hobart Rowen
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a surprisingly upbeat annual report, the World Bank Wednesday said that developing countries had adjusted to world economic problems better than their richer partners, and that their rapid growth would continue into the mid-1980s.

At the same time, the bank expressed concerns about rising protectionist sentiment, and warned rich nations against creation of "artificial barriers" to small-nations' exports that will only delay the "inevitable" industrialization process in the Third World.

The bank's report, preliminary to the annual joint meeting with International Monetary Fund September 25-28 in Washington, also revealed that:

—The Bank will give new emphasis to loans for oil exploration in Third World countries. Loans for six to eight projects amounting to $500 million are scheduled annually beginning with fiscal 1981.

—Excellent harvests, especially in Southeast Asia, have considerably eased food shortages. The report claimed that targets set by World Bank president Robert McNamara, in his Nairobi speech in 1973 setting a goal of a 40 per cent increase for agriculture lending, had been achieved.

—Total loans for fiscal 1978 hit the planned target of $6.1 billion. But tentative commitments of $6.8 billion for fiscal 1979 are contingent on a doubling of the bank's capital. For the time being, $6.8 billion is the target. But officials said that it could be diminished if hopes for the capital increase — to be discussed fully at the annual meeting — are not realized.

The better performance of the less-developed world was reflected in a 14 per cent increase in the dollar value of exports of a wide range of goods. The current account deficit, in the aggregate, dropped from $37.3 billion in 1975 to $22 billion in 1977.

In addition, the trade deficit, at $12.7 billion in 1977, was only half of the average in 1974-75 — the immediate years after the five-fold boost in world oil prices.

Officials said there were many reasons for the good progress in the Third World. With time, they pointed out, many (but not all) have overcome basic poverty, and thus have enjoyed a "take-off" trend.

In addition, middle-tier countries were said to have enjoyed good management, resulting in better responses to international economic crises than was the case in some of the industrial nations.

Moreover, according to the report, the cumulative amounts of world aid and assistance, including the World Bank's, were put to good use. In particular, India — a major Third World nation and the bank's biggest client — has done especially well, partly as a matter of luck and partly because of better agricultural prospects.

PATERNITY TEST 'FOOL-PROOF'

BOSTON (AP) — A test that reveals the makeup of the genes that control immunity provides an almost fool-proof way to find the identity of a child's true father, researchers say.

The new paternity test already has been used in some court cases in California, and doctors report it is so sensitive that it can even determine the rare cases when twins are fathered by different men.

Researchers say the new method, called HLA typing, is far more accurate than the standard blood test used in the past to shed light on paternity.

"This is the single most powerful test for determining paternity," said Judy Bond, a researcher at UCLA Medical School in Los Angeles.

A report on the test was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

HLA typing has been known for about 20 years. But until now, it has mainly been used before organ transplants to make sure that the risk of rejection by the body is as small as possible.

The human body reproduces HLA antigens, which fight the introduction of foreign substances such as a transplanted kidney. These antigens are controlled by a group of genes whose specific makeup varies from person to person.

With HLA typing, researchers are able to perform chemical tests on white blood cells that will reveal the kind of antigens in the suspected father's body. By identifying the antigens, they are able to determine the kind of genes he has.

Is Vitamin E Baby Saver?

BOSTON (AP) — Vitamin E shots may be able to protect babies from a dangerous complication of respiratory distress syndrome, the biggest killer of premature infants, a Yale Medical School study says.

The lungs of premature babies often are not fully developed and the infants must be kept alive on respirators. But the rich oxygen pumped into their bodies can damage the lining of their lungs. This complication, called bronchopulmonary dysplasia, itself can be fatal.

The Yale research, published today in the New England Journal of Medicine, found that injections of vitamin E can trap a damaging form of oxygen before it harms the lungs.

Nine of the vitamin E babies and 13 of the others required more than 250 hours of mechanical breathing on the respirator. Of these, six of the conventionally treated babies developed bronchopulmonary dysplasia, and four died. None of those who took the vitamin E had the complication, and all survived.

Ford Competitors Silent On Pinto Criminal Charge

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s indictment on criminal charges of causing the death of three teen-agers in connection with the crash of a Pinto automobile was met with silence from the auto giant's main competitors.

But lawyers said Wednesday's unprecedented homicide indictment by an Indiana grand jury set the stage for an intriguing court battle on a legally ill-defined point — is an automaker guilty of killing a motorist when it had nothing to do with the accident?

Ford called the indictments unwarranted, denied it had broken Indiana law and promised appropriate action after it studied the indictment.

Ford's chief competitors, General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp., refused to discuss even the general issue of criminal charges being brought because of an alleged auto safety defect.

The charge was handed down by a grand jury in Elkhart, Ind., in connection with a fiery-crash of a Ford Pinto that killed three teen-agers. The jury said Ford knew the Pinto fuel tank was unsafe but did nothing about it.

The jury said the tanks were "recklessly designed and manufactured in such a manner as would likely cause (the Pinto) to flame and burn upon rear-end impact, and that the Ford Motor Co. had a legal duty to warn the general public."

Killed in the Aug. 10 crash were driver Judy Ulrich, 18, of Osceola, Ind.; her sister, Lynn, 16, and their cousin, Donna Ulrich, 18, of Roanoke, Ill. Their 1973 Pinto was stopped on a road and the fuel tank exploded when struck from behind at 80 km.p.h. by a van. The van's driver was not indicted.

The Pinto in which the Ulrich girls died was one of 1.5 million Pinto and Mercury Bobcat sedans made between 1971 and 1976 that Ford recalled in June because the federal government said the fuel tanks leaked too much fuel in rear-end crash tests.

VOLKS PLANT SHUT DOWN BY STRIKE

NEW STANTON, Pa. (AP) — Workers at Volkswagen's only U.S. assembly plant went on strike Wednesday after a UAW member was fired for ordering the assembly line shut down, a union spokesman said.

United Auto Workers Local 1028 negotiator Robert Plisko said the union asked the 1,300 strikers to return to work today because the company offered to reinstate the worker and rescind a suspension given to a second worker who intervened.

"We're kind of waiting to see what happens," said VW spokesman Tom McDonald.

4 Teachers Arrested In Washington Strike

SEATTLE (AP) — Hot tempers and arrests marked the teachers' strike in Everett Wednesday, while negotiations resumed in the four other districts struck by teachers in Washington state.

Four striking teachers were arrested after several vehicles converged on a bus transporting substitute teachers in downtown Everett, in an attempt to force it to stop, said police spokesman Ken Murray.

He said substitute teachers' cars, parked at a central location from which teachers are taken to schools by bus have been damaged since classes began Tuesday.

Everett Mayor Bill Moore said the strike, affecting 11,600 students and 508 regular teachers, could go into next year. No talks were scheduled.

Meanwhile, negotiations resumed in Tacoma, Seattle, Oak Harbor on Whidbey Island and University Place, near Tacoma.

As meetings resumed, the Seattle School Board considered possible court action against the walkout by 3,500 teachers, which has lengthened summer vacation for 55,000 youngsters.

Teachers in Tacoma, who won national attention by a sit-in at district headquarters, finally gave up their roost Wednesday after the district agreed to resume talks.

No back-to-school call appears imminent for the 31,000 students and 1,600 teachers in Tacoma, since the district and teachers have conceded they remain far apart on several issues.

Negotiators for two of the five strikebound school districts — Oak Harbor with 5,300 youngsters and 260 teachers, and University Place with 4,160 and 205 teachers — said they were optimistic.

Fourth Typhoid Case

LONDON (AP) — Health authorities Wednesday reported a fourth case of typhoid fever among passengers who took a cruise on the Soviet liner Litva last month, raising to seven the number of confirmed cases of the disease in Britain.

Three cases appeared to have no connection with the ship. Health officials said they are trying to contact 500 persons who went on cruises aboard the Litva last month.

Thirty-eight British passengers who abandoned the Litva when it docked in Lisbon flew home Wednesday night. Some complained that raw meat and other "atrocious" food was served on the ship.

Four typhoid victims who took an Aug. 5-19 cruise on the Soviet liner, including a Dutchman and a 12-year-old girl, are in isolation wards.

The Port of London Health Authority said the captain of the Litva will face prosecution when the ship docks Saturday at Tilbury, east of London, for failing to notify authorities of sickness on board.

Mrs. Alice Shappell of Bridlington in northern England, one of the 38 who took up an offer from the cruise organizers, CTC Lines of London, for a free flight home and a partial refund, told reporters at London Gatwick airport that "meat was served raw and so were potatoes — but the ship generally was clean."

"Many people were feeling ill and everyone was scared when they read in British papers about the confirmed cases of typhoid," she said.

Mrs. Florence Rose, 68, of Newport, Wales, said: "The food was rubbish. Bacon and sausages were served raw."

Another 213 passengers on the cruise chose to stay aboard, and some told reporters in Lisbon that they were happy with the ship.

Health authorities stressed there is no firm evidence that the Litva is the source of the typhoid outbreak. CTC Lines has cancelled the ship's last cruise of the season, which was to leave Saturday.

Second Testical Transplant

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A surgeon who estimates that one man in 20 might be infertile because of testicle inadequacies says he has transplanted his second human testicle. The first transplant was in May, 1977.

Dr. Sherman J. Silber said Wednesday his transplant team at St. Luke's Hospital West transferred a testicle on Friday from one man to his identical twin, who underwent the surgery because he was infertile.

Dr. Silber said he is 99 per cent certain the transplanted organ will produce normal amounts of sperm.

Testicle transplants are being considered only for identical twins because the ideal gene match ensures a low risk of rejection by the body of the transplant, he said.

The latest patient, who asked that his identity not be disclosed, is 30 years old and from outside St. Louis, the doctor said. The patient's reproductive organs produced male hormones, and male characteristics were normal, but his testicles were unable to produce sperm.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

On the face of it, West made a perfectly normal lead against South's doubled game contract in today's deal. As it turned out, however, this normal lead enabled South to fufill his contract.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble.	2 ♠	3 ◇
4 ♠	5 ◇	Pass	Pass
Dble.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

After West had made the normal lead of the heart king, and the dummy came into view, he shifted to the ace of clubs; and, at trick three continued with the club queen, dummy's king taking the trick. A heart was then ruffed with the ten of diamonds, after which dummy was entered via the diamond queen. A third heart was now ruffed with the diamond king, West's ace falling. The board's queen of hearts had just been promoted into a winner.

Dummy was re-entered via the ace of trumps (picking up East's last trump en route) and on the queen of hearts South discarded his remaining club. With East's ten of hearts being played on this trick, dummy's nine of hearts became the only heart left in the deck. Declarer then trumped dummy's last club and claimed his contract.

In retrospect, and perhaps as a rationalization, closer analysis would have guided West to an opening club lead. Dummy was reasonably certain to have length in hearts, for when a player makes a takeout double over a major-suit opening bid, he usually has support (length) in the other major suit. If this were true on this deal, then it might be vital to establish and cash club tricks before dummy's heart suit would become established.

Actually, if West had held the K-Q-J-x of clubs instead of the A-Q-J-x, an opening club lead would have been correct.

If West lays down the club ace at trick one, he can always shift to hearts if dummy shows up with a weak, shorter heart holding. In the actual deal, as the dummy is observed, West would naturally continue clubs, and the defenders would then cash two club tricks and one heart without any trouble, and defeat South's contract.

EDMONTON — A 35-year-old Tofield, Alta., man has cracked the Provincial Lottery's scratch' n' win system.

Bob Silverthorn, a math and science instructor at Northern Alberta Institute of Technology in Edmonton, has baffled lottery officials by picking nine tickets with instant free prizes of free tickets out of 50 at random.

Silverthorn, who says he has invested $100 in tickets, said he has no system.

LONDON — A simple private funeral was held Wednesday for Keith Moon, hell-raising drummer of the British rock group The Who.

LOS ANGELES — If you can build a better mousetrap, the world will beat a path to your door, the saying goes. David Redman misunderstood. He thought the key was "bigger" mousetrap.

That is why Redman built a mousetrap seven feet long and three feet wide out of car springs and plywood. Then, to make certain his work of art would be noticed, he placed it on the lawn of the old state building in downtown Los Angeles late Tuesday night.

"It was my gift to the city," said the 40-year-old South Pasadena artist.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Penny Williams was looking forward to her 100th birthday next month, but she died of gunshot wounds Tuesday night.

Relatives said Mrs. Williams had told them she had about $1,500 in her house, including $380 in silver. "She didn't trust banks," said Mrs. Annie Laura Fox, a niece.

Mrs. Williams was to celebrate her 100th birthday Oct. 30 and "my children and I already were planning to give her a party," Mrs. Fox said.

The Moonies Move In No — They're Baptists!

INNISFAIL, Alta. (CP) — Gordon and Viola Moodie moved to this central Alberta farming area last fall after 23 years in Calgary and thought they had found what they wanted.

The neighbors thought the Moodies were Moonies, members of Korean minister Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church. The Moonies have been accused of brainwashing young people.

About 200 local residents packed the Bowden United Church on Aug. 29 at a meeting held to protest the Moonie invasion. Some participants spoke with tears in their eyes.

Innisfail MLA Cliff Doan checked into the Moonies after the meeting and found they were really Moodies.

The Moodies, long-time fervent Baptists, said they were floored by the fuss.

Trees Need Right Hole

The planting hole for a tree differs from that for a shrub, for it has a firm mound in the centre on which the trunk is set.

This mound supports the weight of the tree, preventing it from sinking in the freshly dug soil, a condition which would cause the bark on the trunk to rot. It is especially important that trees grafted to dwarfing rootstocks should not sink and allow the scion stock to make its own roots and eliminate the effect of the dwarfing stock.

To prepare a planting hole for a tree a small stake is driven into the soil to mark the centre of the mound on which the tree will be set. The perimeter of the hole is measured with a piece of string 18 inches in length attached to the stake, giving a hole 36 inches in diameter.

Digging starts approximately one inch from the stake, thrusting the spade into the soil at an angle of about 60 degs. This gives the slope to the mound down which the roots will be placed.

When the mound is roughed out the remainder of the area between mound and perimeter is covered with humus which is thoroughly mixed with the soil, then removed to a pile nearby.

The exposed subsoil is broken up one spade deep and coarse partially rotted compost is worked in to keep it open for good drainage. A strong stake, six feet in length, is driven well into the soil three to four inches from the centre of the mound. The tree is attached to this stake to hold it in position while being planted, and the stake remains for about two years until anchor roots have a firm hold on the soil.

Holes should be prepared in September although trees lifted from nursery rows may not be available until late October, and the pile of removed soil covered with sheet plastic to keep it dry.

A fair selection of fruit and ornamental trees are now available in containers. These can be planted immediately. Container grown trees will have a ball of roots instead of the shortened bare roots found on trees lifted from the nursery row.

First remove the container then carefully loosen some of the larger roots without damaging the finer roots. It is then possible to estimate whether a central mound is necessary, and the height of such a mound to have the soil mark on the trunk level with the surrounding soil.

After a tree or a shrub is set into a planting hole, the prepared soil in the neaby heap is first worked under the roots and into the roots with the hands, or pressed around and under the bare roots of a tree.

When the hole is two-thirds full of soil, water is added from the hose to wash the soil into the root system and to drive out air which collects in pockets in the dry soil. This is done even when planting in rain because the fine hair-like feeding roots will die unless in tight contact with soil.

After this soaking, the water is allowed to drain away, and the hole topped with dry soil mixture to the required level and again watered.

The permanent tie which holds the tree to the stake is made from a piece of wire about 18 inches in length threaded through an 8 inch length of old hose pipe.

The hose is looped loosely around the trunk of the tree and the wire ends twisted together for two to three inches as a spacer, then securely fastened to the stake. Allowing the trunk to sway a little in wind assists in the formation of deep anchor roots which will hold the tree firmly when the stake is removed a couple of years later.

New Buoy Watches Weather

CALGARY (CP) — An electronically sophisticated buoy will be commissioned Sept. 21 in St. John's Nfld., as part of a multi-million dollar environmental study in support of a proposed drilling program off Canada's east coast, Esso Resources Canada Ltd. said.

In a news release, it said the discus-hull buoy, which measures 10 metres in diameter, is equipped with a complete meterological and oceanographic instrument package to monitor environmental conditions as part of a weather and sea-state analysis study this fall.

The company said the buoy will carry on board a communication system that will broadcast the measured data to a shore base.

The buoy will record wind speed and direction, air temperature, barometric pressure, the surface temperature of the water and data concerning wave behavior from its mooring location off the Labrador northern coast.

The company said the buoy will remain at its mooring position until mid-november or until ice conditions dictate it should be retrieved.

Britain Asked Nazis To Halt Jews Fleeing

LONDON (Reuter) — Six months before the outbreak of the Second World War, in which six million Jews were exterminated, Britain asked Nazi Germany to stop unauthorized Jewish emigration, says Martin Gilbert, Sir Winston Churchill's biographer.

In a history of the emergence of Jewish statehood, Gilbert records that the Foreign Office instructed Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador in Berlin, to make a joint approach to Nazi authorities with his U.S. colleague aimed at checking illegal Jewish migration to Palestine.

"Henderson did as he was instructed," Gilbert writes in his book published today, "urging the German government 'to check unauthorized emigration' of Jews from the German Reich."

Gilbert has already published three volumes of his authorized biography of Britain's wartime prime minister, who was an early supporter of Zionism.

In Exile and Return, Gilbert uses quotations from cabinet papers and Foreign Office telegrams to document the largely successful attempts Britain made before, during, and after the war to limit Jewish migration to Palestine for fear of alienating the Arabs.

Two considerations dictated this policy: concern for Britain's supplies of Arab oil and fear of disaffection among the massive Moslem population of the British Empire if an anti-Arab policy were pursued.

As the mandate power in Palestine, Britain had the prime responsibility for deciding whether the Middle East would provide a refuge for Jews fleeing Nazi tyranny.

But Gilbert makes clear that, with a few such honorable exceptions as the Netherlands, Denmark and the Dominican Republic, the reaction of world governments to the plight of the Jews was as negative as Britain's.

Preoccupied with domestic unemployment and economic problems and fearful that substantial Jewish immigration would inflame anti-Semitism, Western governments opened their doors to only a trickle of Jewish refugees from Hitler.

Gilbert writes that, given the pre-war quota for the admission of German and Austrian refugees to the United States, an earlier haven for millions of East European Jews, it would have taken 20 years for all the Jews in the Third Reich to find asylum in America.

Nor could the Jews look for salvation in the east. The British consul in Moscow wrote in January, 19 9: "An infinitely larger number of Jews have been executed in the Soviet Union in the last two years than in Germany under the National Socialist regime, while an equal if not larger number have been placed in the concentration camps."

Gilbert's dispassionate account of how the world, through ignorance, indifference, political calculation or anti-Semitism, abandoned Europe's Jews to their fate under the Nazis helps explain why Israel today rejects any proposal that would entrust its survival as a state to international guarantees.

Gilbert says British efforts to check the flight of Jews from Europe to Palestine, where they would have tilted the population balance against the indigenous Arab inhabitants, were extensive and intense and had the support of the late King George VI.

Apart from the approach to the Nazis themselves, pressure was brought to bear on Romania, Greece, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, and Turkey to check the flow of refugees.

In February, 1939, the king's private secretary told the foreign secretary: "The king has heard from Lord Gort that a number of Jewish refugees from different countries were surreptitiously getting into Palestine, and he is glad to think that steps are being taken to prevent these people leaving their country of origin."

British efforts against salvation continued after the outbreak of the war. Malcolm MacDonald, then colonial secretary, blocked the admissiom of 20,000 Polish Jewish children to Palestine during the first month of the war.

The minutes of a government meeting gave this reason: "However brutal it may sound, to remove 20,000 children from Poland at this moment would pro tanto (to a corresponding extent) simplify the German economic problem."

Under the pressure of wartime events, even Churchill, who had supported the Zionist cause since the days of the historic Balfour declaration in 1917, modified his policy.

Although Gilbert records Churchill's continued concern that Jews who managed to flee from Europe be treated humanely, the war cabinet under his leadership decided in March, 1942, that "all practicable steps should be taken to discourage illegal immigration into Palestine."

Four years later, addressing the House of Commons as leader of the opposition, Churchill said, "No one can imagine that there is room in Palestine for the great masses of Jews who wish to leave Europe."

But Gilbert's quotations from Churchill show him to have been free of the anti-Semitism which, in the days before the wartime holocaust, some British officials expressed without inhibition in letters and memoranda.

The documents on the conflicting commitments which Britain gave during the First World War to the Jews in the Balfour Declaration and to the Arabs in financing and arming their desert revolt against the Turks support the thesis that the government was motivated primarily by wartime expediency rather than deliberate duplicity.

At the height of the country's imperial power, for many Britons, Jews and Arabs alike were, in the words of Kipling, "lesser breeds without the law."

This viewpoint was summed up with succinct brutality in a comment by the chief of the Imperial General Staff, Sir Henry Wilson, at a 1920 international conference on the Middle East: "The whole lot, Arabs, Jews, Christians, Syrians, Levantines, Greeks, etc., are beastly people and not worth one Englishman."

Cluster Cancer Cases Not Solved By Probe

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A state investigation into a cluster of cancer cases here has found nine carcinogens present in the air, but none in great enough concentration to explain the abnormally high incidence of leukemia and Hodgkin's disease.

A report on the investigation, obtained by the Record of Hackensack in advance of its release tonight, summarizes several months of environmental and health studies into the possible causes of 32 cases of blood-related cancers among Rutherford's population of 21,000.

Investigators concentrated on six cases of leukemia near the Pierrepont school and nine cases of Hodgkin's disease.

Air samples taken in the school area all showed signs of benzene — a known cause of leukemia — as did one soil sample there, the report said. However, the concentrations at the school were no higher than at other testing sites in the town and far less than the U.S. maximum workplace standard of 10 parts per million.

Core Areas Blamed For Sooke Problem

Sooke's desire to have an economic development commission is being thwarted by decisions being made by core municipalities, the Capital Regional District's executive committee was told Wednesday.

Sooke must have letters patent granted through the regional district in order to get a commission. When the board considered the wording of letters patent it decided, rather than covering Sooke alone, the legislation should make it possible for other municipalities to also have commissions if they wished.

Under the proposed legislation any municipality would decide for itself whether or not it wanted a commission and administer the commission itself.

Victoria alderman Murray Glazier, however, told the committee that although aldermen understand they would not be handing over any authority to the regional district they still refuse to endorse any letters patent.

"Anthing that could seem to extend regional responsibilities has two or three votes against it right away," he said.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said it was a trifle disturbing that anything so transparently clear should be misunderstood "by such an august body as Victoria city council or the even more professionally adequate group of people on Oak Bay council."

Victoria alderman Bill Tindall said some had suggested Sooke use a commission that is already set up by the four core municipalities but was told Sooke instigators must have letters patent to allow them to do so.

Downed Pilot Rescued

Pen Powell, 61, of Hudson Hope radioed, "I'm crash-landing 20 miles northwest of Fort St. John." His message was picked up by the unidentified pilot of another plane, who headed for the area and picked up a transmission from the downed plane's locator device at 4:30 p.m.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said today the crash site was 50 miles west of Fort St. John.

The pilot of the second plane relayed directions to the centre, which sent a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox. The Buffalo located the crash site at 7:30 p.m. and two rescue specialists parachuted to the scene and found Powell uninjured.

The parachutists and Powell were taken by chartered helicopter to Fort St. John.

Cholera Shots Rushed

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — An emergency innoculation campaign was under way in a dozen flood-ravaged towns today in a bid to prevent further outbreaks of cholera and gastro-enteritis in northern India.

Drugs were rushed to towns in Uttar Pradesh and a state minister said innoculations will be carried out on an emergency basis.

Cholera already has been reported in the Hindu pilgrimage centre of Allahabad, while the holy city of Varanasi has been declared an epidemic area.

Gastro-enteritis has hit several other parts of the state following the most devastating floods in India in nearly a century.

The floods are receding in Uttar Pradesh, except in eastern districts, and officials began disinfecting the area as the floodwaters went down.

But the Ganges River still was flooding vast areas in Monghyar and Katihar districts of the northeastern state of Bihar and threatened to breach several embankments.

MORE RAIN threatened to add to the problems today in Arkansas, where this driver was trying to move his stalled car from a Little Rock intersection after about 110 mm (4.5 inches) of rain fell Wednesday during a four-hour period. At least 10 persons were killed by the floods and national guardsmen were patrolling in many communities today to prevent lotting. All highways into Little Rock were closed today by flooding

Plastic Medical Cards To Record MD Visits

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbians visiting their family doctor in the future will be required to take along a plastic credit card-style medical identity card, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Wednesday.

The doctor's receptionist will run it through a machine to record each visit, he said. Eventually, every person in the province will have an identifying number for medical purposes.

McClelland said there would likely be objections to the plan and, because of difficulties in establishing a satisfactory identity number system, it will likely be two or three years before it is introduced.

The minister disclosed details of the plan after confirming that the government had backed down on its order that patients must sign medical care claim forms when they visit a doctor.

The government and the board of directors of the B.C. Medical Association have agreed to a three-part plan "which will allow the government to shelve its card-signing requirement," McClelland said.

However the plan still meets "the audit and accountability objectives of the ministry of health, of the Medical Services Commission and of the medical profession itself," he told members of Vancouver Centre Social Credit Constituency Association during their annual meeting.

As well as the introduction of plastic identity cards, the plan also calls for expansion of the BCMA's patterns of practice committee to include a member of the public and a representative of the provincial government.

The third part of the plan calls for increasing the number of itemized statements mailed to the public.

McClelland said that up to now the patterns of practice committee had consisted only of doctors and he was pleased that the BCMA agreed there were advantages to having the public and government represented on the committee.

The minister said he hoped the agreement would end an atmosphere of confrontation which existed between the government and the medical profession.

Both sides have a stake in keeping down costs of the province's medical insurance plan, he said.

TALKS ENDING

Blueprint For Mid-East Settlement At Hand

CAMP DAVID (UPI) — The Camp David summit is nearing an end, and conference and congressional sources say agreement is close on a detailed and comprehensive blueprint for an eventual Middle East settlement.

The framework is an ambitious undertaking, according to the sources, who said it goes far beyond the broad declaration of principles that was one of the early options at the summit.

Conference sources said the agreement is shaping up "but if it is to be reached still more flexibility has to be shown by both sides."

As the conference moved toward its climax, the need to settle the final details prompted President Carter to postpone for a week a four-state political tour of North and South Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania he intended to make this weekend.

H also did not return to Washington, as he had planned, to host a concert at the White House by country singer Willie Nelson. Rosalynn Carter and the president's brother, Billy, played host in his absence.

Congressional sources said Carter is expected to make a report to the nation soon on the summit negotiations, and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will spend two or three days talking to members of Congress and other American leaders before returning home.

A comprehensive blueprint would serve as a guideline for a comprehensive Middle East settlement that would have to include Jordan, since the occupied West Bank is a key issue.

The final details would be worked out by the foreign ministers of the countries, perhaps beginning within two weeks.

The sources said the comprehensive blueprint covers the main points in dispute but leaves open some points that could not be settled.

BEER WALKOUT OVER HIRING

Brewery workers at the Labatt Breweries plant in New Westminster walked off the job Wednesday in a dispute over the hiring of non-union security guards.

John Langley of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers said the guards originally were hired during the labor dispute that closed most B.C. breweries for three months this summer.

"The guards crossed picket lines," Langley said, and at Labatts there were several incidents between the guards and pickets.

"That bad blood apparently has carried over even when we were prepared to go to work," he said. About 270 workers are affected.

There was no indication the walkout might spread to other brewery operations.

Meanwhile, Labatts has so far hired back only 75 of its 100 Victoria employees because of the low level of purchases by the Liquor Distribution Branch, the company said today.

"We're having a difficult time keeping the 75 people busy," Victoria manager Robert Mussett said.

"There is one shift of 25 employees who have not yet been hired back and it might be several weeks before we can take them on."

He said he hopes the company will be able to sell more beer to government liquor stores soon so all employees could get back to work.

Mainland breweries have also reported business is slow and some layoffs have resulted.

One Vancouver firm has laid off 100 workers and is going with one shift instead of three.

Trudeau Sees Spring Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he expects to lead the Liberals into a general election sometime next spring.

Trudeau said at a news conference that he will present a program to Parliament when it resumes. He said he wants "to clear the decks and show the people what our intentions are" before the election.

Asked about his future as leader of the party, the prime minister replied that he expects to head the governing Liberals through the next election.

Squamish Loses To Taxis

SQUAMISH (CP) — Vancouver longshoremen employed here travel 40 miles to and from work each day by taxi at a cost of $500,000 a year while Squamish residents can't find jobs.

But Squamish Mayor Pat Brennan, who called union and company officials together to complain about the situation, was told Tuesday he can do little about the arrangement because the terms are written into the labor contract.

This situation exists, he said, because the dock is within the jurisdiction of Local 500 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, based in Vancouver.

Brennan said jobs have been scarce in Squamish since the closure last fall of the B.C. Railway rail car manufacturing plant, which put 170 employees out of work.

Squamish Terminals manager Frank Collard said the the Squamish dock, opened in December, 1971, handles about 500,000 tons of pulp annually. The town is pushing for funds for a second berth, but would like to clear up the manning problem first.

He said the longshoremen want the best of both worlds. They take jobs in Squamish when there is little work in Vancouver but two or three times a year, Squamish is short of manpower because the Vancouver port is busy.

WELCOME BACK HORTON is the message given this boa constrictor by Shelley Scott and other students at a Brandon, Man. school. Horton went missing for four weeks and was found curled up in a corner of a classroom.

B.C. Eyes Control Of Local Budgets

The provincial cabinet is considering ways of limiting budget increases imposed by local governments, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said today.

Asked if provincial control of those budgets is a real possibility in the near future, Wolfe replied: "No comment."

Wolfe, chairman of the six-member cabinet property taxation committee, stressed a means of controlling municipal and school board budgets is just one of many topics discussed by the committee over the past two years.

There are a number of recommendations in a report on municipal assessments that the cabinet is looking at, Wolfe said.

He would not elaborate.

Wolfe said the public, such as the homeowners at a Delta meeting Wednesday, have been asking the provincial government to control municipal-level spending.

But the minister had little to say about what the government is considering and at times in an interview following a taxation talk to the Delta Chamber of Commerce, he appeared annoyed that had even mentioned the possibility of budget controls in the interview.

During his speech to the chamber and some of almost 260 South Delta property owners who recently got a supplementary tax payment notice following a computer foulup by the government's B.C. Assessment Authority, Wolfe said he welcomes the California taxpayers' revolt and its spread to B.C.

In a question period following his talk he heard complaints from many businessmen and particularly the South Delta residents, some of whom said they had no complaint about their assessments but they did not like the municipal mill rate which determines the taxes to be paid.

A few suggested it is time for the provincial government to step in and control municipal and school spending.

Wolfe told the meeting that this could be difficult because councils and school boards

S. Africa Violence Flares

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — Police holding leashed dogs raided a squatters camp, shot and killed one black and wounded another in the worst flareup of racial violence in months.

Witnesses said hundreds were arrested and police used teargas in the early morning raid against rock-throwing blacks in the camp, a sprawling collection of makeshift tents holding 6,000 blacks.

The South African government has vowed to clear out squatter camps because they are unhygienic.

The riot police wielding batons swarmed into the Crossroads squatter camp and began checking residents for "passes" which all adult South African blacks need to remain in white areas.

Gen. Dawid Kiel, South Africa's Chief of Riot Police, said one black was killed after he attacked a policeman.

"I don't think there'll be any more trouble now," Kriel said.

Witnesses said a black woman was wounded in the arm by gunfire.

Blacks retaliated with rock-throwing bursts against the police after the shooting, witnesses said. Crowds gathered around the dead man, and for a while they refused to allow police to take away his body.

Police launched a routine midnight raid without incident and then returned for a second, unexpected, investigation just after dawn. By 9 a.m. hundreds of residents were bundled into waiting vans — apparently because they lacked valid passes, witnesses said.

Architect Got $36,000-Suite

MONTREAL (CP) — French architect Roger Taillibert was provided with a $36,000-a-year permanent suite at Montreal's Queen Elizabeth hotel, an inquiry into the cost of the 1976 Olympic Games was told Wednesday.

Claude Phaneuf, a former City of Montreal engineer who directed games construction, said Taillibert came to Montreal often, to work on plans for games facilities he designed.

The suite was rented on a permanent basis because it was not always easy to obtain a reservation at the downtown hotel which Taillibert preferred, Phaneuf said. He added that to the best of his memory the rental arrangement ran for 18 months starting sometime in 1974.

Asked by commission counsel Jacques Dagenais why the city did not save money by renting an apartment for Taillibert, Phaneuf said he did not know.

"Taillibert had moved into the Queen Elizabeth hotel and I wasn't the one who had the authority to move him out," he said.

"As well, we weren't about to move out all his voluminous plans each time," Phaneuf said. "He sometimes came to Montreal twice a week.

"Taillibert had hours that were different from the rest of us. He would go to bed late and get up early."

Asked why the architect did not work in a City of Montreal office, Phaneuf said it was because he had had "certain confrontations with Taillibert."

Taillibert, along with Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau, has been one of the main figures discussed in testimony heard in the first two weeks of public hearings before the inquiry.

BUSES BACK BY FRIDAY

TORONTO (CP) — Buses, streetcars and subway trains in Toronto will be operating again Friday morning as a result of provincial legislation ordering an end to a strike by about 7,000 employees of the Toronto Transit Commission, commission and union officials say.

Charles Johnson, president of Division 113 of the union, said in a statement that the union had directed its members to return to work "no matter what their personal feelings may be."

With a mail strike threatened for Sept. 22, Victoria businessmen are angry, airlines have mixed emotions and courier service managers are rubbing their hands in glee.

Ansell said the chamber is gearing up a cross-Canada mail and parcel service that would use courier companies to deliver sacks to chamber offices in other cities.

Businessmen would be able to pick up incoming mail at the chamber office.

"This service is for chamber members only," Ansell said, "and we don't want to compete with private courier services — we are just doing our best to look after the needs of the community."

Ansell said chamber staff members will phone local merchants when mail comes in and members would have to pick it up themselves since the staff will not be able to handle deliveries as well.

Meanwhile, Harry Lund, manager of Ace Courier (formerly Pacific Rim Courier) said a mail strike would be the best thing that ever happened to the company.

"We have 12 employees here now and we would have to hire more to handle all the business.

Lund said most of the business would come from merchants and government departments because residents find the $6 cost to send a parcel to Vancouver a bit expensive.

"Still, it's not a bad price for overnight guaranteed delivery. It's as low as we can make it."

Lund said Victoria courier services would have more business than they could handle if a mail strike hits but they would do their best by hiring additional people.

Spokesmen for major department stores were resigned about mail strikes and said they plan to beef up their in-plant delivery systems.

A spokesman for The Bay said the company has retained delivery systems it developed in previous mail strikes and is not too concerned.

Air Canada would both lose and gain if the letter carriers strike on Sept. 22.

The company has a new Airvelope Service which takes parcels under two pounds to any of 17 major Canadian cities for next-day delivery at a charge of $8.

Nip in the Air Titillates Tubbers

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What's better than a hot tub and a glass of wine?

Such a hot tub has been built by three Victoria men who call themselves The Original Vintner's Hot Tub Company.

It began when Andrew Penn, 24, returned from Britain where he was a medical student at Cambridge University and tried to get a job. There were none. He even tried to get a job in a mortuary, thinking his medical background would be an asset.

Finally, he found work at Jordan and Ste. Michelle Cellars Ltd. on Quadra just before the winery moved to Surrey.

The elder Penn says he became interested in hot tubs when he was in Britain after reading an article in a medical journal extolling the benefits gained from such watering spas as the ones at Bath.

He became even more interested after reading how hot tubs are becoming the rage in California, the ones being made of discarded California wine barrels being the "Cadillacs" of the business.

The trio completed the first hot tub three weeks ago, inatalling it adjacent to the back patio of a friend's home at 1383 Mount Newton.

The pungent aroma of wine filled the air when the Times dropped in. Built of half a barrel, it's 10 feet wide, 12 feet high and made of three-inch thick Douglas fir that has had 20 years to soak up its aromatic fragrance.

"It has seating for 12 and you could probably squeeze in 20. It's been pretty well stacked since we got it in," Briony, the Penns' sister, said.

Outfitted with a circulatory pump, propane heater and filter, the tub has a whirlpool that gives a good back massage, she said.

Her brothers and Young have about 30 old barrels they intend to make into hot tubs and the elder Penn says people like internationally-known flutist Paul Horn are interested.

Penn will return to Cambridge soon to finish his last two years of medical school, his brother will continue flying while Young will take time out from university to promote the tubs.

They say sitting in the "biggest hot tub in town" after a busy day is hard to beat, especially when the odd shower makes the 105-degree water even more enjoyable.

Ambulance Checkup

Saanich aldermen are keeping a close eye on the new provincial Emergency Health Services Commission (EHSC) following reports of slow ambulance response time, Ald. Robert Cameron said today.

Cameron, chairman of the fire committee, said he and another alderman had heard of a few cases where the response was slower than it should be "and we just want to make sure that they're isolated incidents.

Water Driller Dies After Rig Shifts

Brian Slade was pinned under a rear metal grate when the rig shifted. Despite the efforts of his brother, Paul, 19, who was working with him, Brian died a short time later.

A Shawnigan Lake RCMP spokesman said the mishap occurred about 3:45 p.m. on a housing site on the Port Renfrew Road about seven kilometres west of the West Shawnigan Lake Road turnoff.

The brothers, employees of Drillwell Enterprises, owned by their father, Kenneth Slade, also of Duncan, were setting up the rig preparing to drill.

The police spokesman said Brian was not satisfied with the way the rig was positioned and was attempting to reset the blocks in soft dirt under the drill truck when the unit rolled back four or five inches.

Paul was in another truck at the time and when he saw what happened rushed over and pried up the grate with a shovel.

The spokesman said Brian regained consciousness, said something to his brother, and then lapsed into a coma.

Paul radioed for help over a citizen's band radio. Their father was contacted and raced to the scene where both he and Paul attempted to revive Brian.

"I've been in the business 30 years and there's never been a serious accident like this," he said. "It was a freak accident."

Brian, well known in the Duncan area, was a rugby player and had played in a game last Sunday.

UVic Rejects Language Bid

Students entering the University of Victoria will not need French 11 or a foreign language equivalent for admission, a UVic Senate meeting resolved Wednesday.

The language requirement, proposed by Dr. Michael Best, failed to gain enough support among faculty members when it came time to vote.

Best suggested last fall that UVic follow the example of the University of B.C. which by 1981 will require French or another Grade 11 second language for entrance.

Region Going to Fraser Over Portage Damage

The Capital Regional District board named a committee Wednesday to meet Highways Minister Alex Fraser in an effort to repair damage to Portage Inlet done by his department.

Members are board chairman Jim Campbell, directors Murray Glazier, Al Beasley and Shirley Dowell; executive director Dennis Young, regional planner Peter Hammer, regional engineer Norman Howard and Ernest Beland, a View Royal resident who is leading a protest against a tourist bureau and other facilities planned for the site.

Beasley said Wednesday, although they had been assured there would be no more dumping, fill was still being dumped last week and now stands seven to eight feet high.

The minister has been informed the highways department project contravenes View Royal's settlement plan for the scenic shoreline.

Campbell said he had a commitment in writing from Fraser that something would be done to alleviate the problem.

"I don't doubt the minister's integrity," he said.

AirWest Traffic Slips

Passenger traffic on AirWest has dropped 30 to 35 per cent since the Labor Day weekend, but an official says the Sept. 2 fatal crash in Vancouver isn't the main cause.

Dick Laidman, AirWest general manager, said Wednesday there is always a drop in passenger traffic after the Labor Day weekend, especially on the West Coast.

Airlines can look to a 25 per cent drop, he said, so AirWest is likely experiencing a seven to 10 per cent reduction in the number of passengers because of the accident which claimed 11 lives.

Laidman said there is a natural hesitancy against flying an airline that has had some trouble, but it soon wears off.

AirWest is not expecting any permanent loss of passenger volume because of the crash, he said.

The airline is about to implement its winter schedule which will see the 15 daily flights each way reduced to about eight or 10.

AirWest consolidated a number of its regularly scheduled flights in recent days. Others have been flying empty or with only a handful of passengers.

The airline has also substituted smaller Beavers for the 17-passenger Twin Otters on some flights.

Student Repeats

The prize was a visit to Bell-Northern Research laboratories in Ottawa at the end of August.

Just back, Hemphill said the visit to Bell-Northern was an eye-opening introduction to the frontiers of telecommunications science.

UVic Man To Vienna

A University of Victoria law faculty professor is one of 10 Canadians invited to an international human rights congress in Vienna this month.

Professor James C. MacPherson, will attend the Sept. 12-16 congress as a UVic delegate.

Ask The Times

Q. I am interested in learning invisible mending. Could you please tell me where I could buy reweaving needles. S.B.

A. There is nobody in the Greater Victoria area that teaches invisible mending. One professional mender who has been in the business for 30 years says it's a costly and lengthy undertaking. The Victoria Needlecraft Centre at 1863 Oak Bay Avenue will have reweaving needles in stock in a month's time.

Q. Do you happen to know where a person could get a course in Latin in Victoria? G.H.

A. The University of Victoria offers a variety of day and evening linguistics courses. For more information about Latin the best bet would be to telephone UVic's continuing education department, 477-6911, local 4802.

Changes In Bus Routes Studied

B.C. Hydro bus services may undergo a number of timetable and routing changes in Victoria this fall but service cuts are unlikely, Ald. Bill McElroy said today.

McElroy, the city's transportation committee chairman, said he's had discussions with Hydro about the changes but there has never been any talk about cutbacks.

He said his discussions with Hydro have all been aimed at clearing up the bottleneck of buses that occurs in the layover zones downtown.

Hydro is planning to reduce services on some of its runs in Vancouver this Novermber, but McElroy said it is vital that the level of service in Victoria be maintained.

Boosted Activity Forecast Here In Construction

Things are bad for the construction industry in Victoria — and the winter will be tough — but there are better days ahead, industry spokesmen say.

Dave Weller, manager of the Construction Association of Victoria, said unemployment in the building trades industry may peak at 30 per cent — about 2,000 tradesmen — this winter and then decline.

By contrast, the province-wide jobless rate in construction is expected to hit 50 per cent over the winter.

Weller said local tendering has picked up considerably during the past four weeks and this will result in a number of projects getting under way by spring.

"I think we will see considerable improvement by mid-1979."

However, a full recovery may not come until 1980 or 1981, he said.

Farmer Construction president Wayne Farmer agreed with this estimate and expressed confidence Victoria will have a full recovery by 1981.

"There is a definite improvement," Farmer said. "We have more going on than at this time last year."

He said government and other institutional construction work has been cushioning the blow of a slack pace of building by private enterprise.

Projects under way or about to begin include two hospitals, several schools and renovations at the Legislative Buildings.

Farmer said many investors foresee a Victoria boom within three years and foreign developers are already coming to the area looking for sites for new commercial projects.

"Investors want to get in now because they need at least a two-year lead time for construction."

Farmer said he knew of investors from Germany, the United Kingdom and Australia, all looking for commercial opportunities in the region.

Japanese investors are also expected here, he said.

Foreign money is attracted to North America because of the declining cost of the U.S. and Canadian dollar, he said, and Victoria is favored because investors believe it will recover faster than most other areas.

"The consensus is we will have a complete recovery by 1981 and they want to get in now so they can participate in it."

Farmer said the investors are looking for all types of commercial opportunities, including sites for shopping centres.

But, while full recovery may not be far away, there will be some tough months ahead for the industry, he said.

Farmer, honorary treasurer of the Canadian Construction Association, said he was not surprised that a study by the B.C. Construction Association showed provincial construction industry unemployment could hit 50 per cent this winter.

The association said there were 15,509 of the province's 64,000 building trades employees collecting unemployment insurance in August.

In March the total had been 25,430.

Farmer said the 50 per cent forecast could come true for B.C. as a whole but Victoria will not be hit as hard.

The jobless rate in construction trades here likely will run at about 30 per cent over the winter, which is high but lower than in recent years.

Camsell's Long Tow To Start Saturday

The Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell, holed by Arctic ice Sunday morning, is expected to start a 5,000-mile tow to her home port of Victoria on Saturday.

The tug Canmar Supplier 3 arrived alongside the Camsell at Cambridge Bay at 2 a.m. today and will tow the Camsell 2,000 miles to Point Barrow. The tow then will be taken over by another commercial tug.

Department of Transport district manager Larry Slaght said the two gashes in the Camsell's port side — one seven feet and the other four feet — have been exposed and it is hoped temporary repairs will be completed by Thursday night.

Meanwhile, the remaining 21 crew members aboard Camsell are extremely uncomfortable, Slaght said. The temperature is below zero and, because the engines were damaged when the engine room was flooded, there is no heat.

Slaght said it is hoped to evacuate the crew members soon and put Camsell in a "dead ship condition" for the tow home.

Radford Sizes Up Bawlf

The man who held the recreation and conservation portfolio in the NDP government plans to challenge the Socred incumbent head-on in the next provincial election.

Jack Radford said today he will seek an NDP nomination in two-riding Victoria in a bid to oust Sam Bawlf.

Radford, who is a Vancouver Island representative for the Canadian Labor Congress, lives in Victoria and is a member of the city's NDP constituency association.

He said today a number of people have approached him about running against Bawlf.

"It could be interesting," Radford said.

He said he believes such a contest would be the first in B.C. history where a former minister took on the man who succeeded him in his portfolio.

QUEBEC GPs ALONE ARE HAPPY: SURVEY

TORONTO (CP) — A survey of Canadian doctors shows that general practitioners in Quebec are the only happy doctors in the country, says an official of the College of Family Physicians of Canada.

Dr. Gary Gibson, president of the college's Ontario chapter, said in a speech to the Ontario Medical Association that a college survey showed that Quebec has the only "generally happy and satisfied family doctors in Canada."

Dr. Gibson said this is probably because Quebec pays its doctors for some services according to the amount of time spent with patients, while Ontario bases payments on procedures performed.

A college report released this week refers to family doctors as "dumbbells (working for) peanuts."

The report says that the average income of Ontario doctors fell to about $37,000 in 1976 from $41,000 in 1972.

The report said that rural doctors earn more than their urban counterparts and that doctors working in group practices have higher incomes than those working on their own.

A Day in the Life Of Two Soldiers

OTTAWA (CP) — In the military, rules are not made to be broken.

Their case was taken up by Progressive Conservative MP Michael Forrestall who wrote to Defence Minister Barney Danson.

Correspondence released by Forrestall shows the defence department ruled that because the men were released from the armed forces one day short of an additional year's service, they were not entitled to pension benefits for that period.

When the two became eligible for indexing provisions to supplement their military pensions — an arrangement that begins when age and years of service total 85 — they were told only full, complete years of service were counted.

Consequently, they had to wait another year before drawing benefits and received no credit for their "one day short" year.

Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East) took the plight of his two constituents to Danson after the pair had been rebuffed on appeals by lower levels in the bureaucracy.

But Danson rejected Forrestall's plea to make an exception to the rules on moral grounds or, alternatively, to allow the men to serve one day in the reserves to make up the critical one day.

"There is no legal way, except by obtaining a special Act of Parliament, whereby authority could be obtained to change the date of a person's release so as to extend the duration of service in the regular force by one day as suggested," the minister said.

Danson also said "there is no moral justification" for requesting a special act of Parliament since the situation is not unique. Many persons have made such submissions, he said.

"Although it would be nice to provide benefits to everyone by counting years and days, guidelines and regulations are necessary, and unfortunately not all personnel benefit by the decision," Danson acknowledged.

Defence department regulations specify that the effective date of release "shall be set by the approving authority" and that a service member may not claim a specific effective date of release as a right.

The department says that because the indexing provision did not come into effect until 1970, many of the requests for exemptions from those one or two days short of a full year originated from those who retired prior to that date.

Forrestall says Danson's refusal to allow the exemptions as a "cold, callous and narrow interpretation" of the regulations.

New Drug For Eye Problems

TORONTO (CP) — Eye and allergy specialists are seeking government approval of a new drug they say will treat hay fever and a serious eye disorder without the usual side-effects of cataracts and glaucoma.

Two Toronto eye specialists and two Hamilton allergists said Wednesday that the drug, sodium cromoglycate, reduces the need for cortisone, the drug normally used to treat vernal conjunctivitis and itchy eyes caused by hay fever.

Dr. John S. Crawford and Dr. Jerome J. Kazdan, of the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children, said vernal conjunctivitis, which runs in families, inflames eye membranes, causing bumps inside the eyelids.

Ocean Science Aid Urged

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — A federal-provincial task force recommends that investments in Canada's ocean industry be made income-tax deductible and that a Canadian Ocean Technology Resource Authority be set up to distribute $100 million in cost-shared research grants in the industry over five years.

The ocean industry consists of developers and manufacturers of specialized marine hardware, especially that used in offshore oil exploration, in fishing and by the military.

It does not include the shipbuilding or fishing industries.

The report by the Sector Task Force on the Canadian Ocean Industry also recommends that Canadian-content rules be incorporated into the proposed Oil and Gas Act and that taxation and duty regulations on offshore equipment be amended.

RCMP Tells of Stealing Dynamite for Terrorist

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP security service's "dirty tricks" squad stole dynamite from a construction site near Montreal in 1972 to help a terrorist informer, a royal commission was told Wednesday.

Constable Richard Daigle, who helped steal the dynamite, told the McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing that the informer's credibility would be enhanced among his fellow terrorists if he was able to show them a case of dynamite.

Daigle said his orders from S.Sgt. Donald McCleery, then head of the now-disbanded G4 dirty tricks squad, were that the dynamite should not be traceable and should not be obtained through the normal (legal) channels.

Daigle said he and his immediate superior, Cpl. Bernard Dubuc, spent two weeks in late May, 1972, driving around mines and construction sites in the Montreal area "to see if any sticks of dynamite would be left lying around carelessly."

He said he later learned safety laws required all explosives on such sites to be locked up.

He said he was not worried about the legality of the assignment because McCleery and Dubuc had told him to do it and there was some urgency about it.

Acting on a tip from another RCMP officer, Dubuc and Daigle finally found an isolated shed marked "EXPLOSIVES, DANGER" at a Richelieu Construction site somewhere in the Eastern Townships. Daigle was not certain of the location.

Dubuc broke the padlock on the door with a crowbar or tire iron and the men went inside. Groping around in the dark, they found a heavy cardboard box of dynamite and carried it to their car.

Later that day they transferred it to McCleery's summer cottage north of Montreal for undisclosed reasons.

Daigle followed Dubuc in a second police car so that no one would run into the back of the car where the dynamite was.

Mr. Justice McDonald asked Daigle whether he ever considered the operation unlawful. Daigle replied that the reasons for taking the dynamite seemed to justify the operation.

The judge asked where the defence of necessity stopped.

What if a superior told Daigle that "he needed a diamond ring from Birk's," the judge added.

There was "quite a difference" between the two, he told the judge. It would take more planning to get the ring.
